Financial Growth

The motion picture industry stands more firmly entrenched financially than ever before in its history with the entrance of powerful banking interests into the field—Working capital reaches $214,174,710—Need of improved product is recognized—Film records for 1930 show largest gross and net incomes in the history of the trade—Increase of stockholders to 118,000 reflects attractiveness of earning power.

Entrance into the motion picture business of powerful banking interests, maintenance of earnings in the face of widespread business depression and changes in control and management of leading units in the field made the past year one of the most significant financially in the history of the film industry.

Following the transition from silent pictures to dialogue and subsequent popular appeal, the motion picture industry demonstrated its permanence and stability enough to attract the increasing attention of financial interests which theretofore backed only the older industries.

The step, however, was not made without shakeups and the trend for passing of control of the industry from strictly film to banking hands was accentuated by such incidents as the Fox battle and indications are that financial surveillance of the business is ever on the increase.

In the face of the general business depression in 1930 the industry ran up the largest gross and net incomes in its history, at a time when earnings in other lines of activity were suffering severely.

This demonstration of earning power whether business is good or bad has not failed to attract the increasing attention of the investment and speculative fraternity, and stockholders in motion picture companies increased from 49,258 in April, 1928, to the present total of approximately 112,000.

On top of all this the industry has come to recognize the necessity for putting out a better product to maintain earnings now that the novelty of the talking picture had worn off and competition among the leading units is keener than it ever has been. With this recognition, the events of the past year or so indicate, has come a more conservative business management that left the industry at the end of 1930 with a working capital of $214,174,710, compared with $209,686,974 in 1929 and $177,774,666 in 1928.

With a more strongly entrenched financial position than it has ever had and a product recognized as more or less of a necessity in every civilized country of the world, the motion picture industry is in comparatively good shape to withstand the effects of a further prolongation of the economic setback. Earnings, of course, are beginning to reflect the extended business depression, but, in comparison with other fields, the decreases are small and the future income, it is indicated, will depend more on the quality of product than on the fluctuations of the purchasing power of the public, which has given evidence that it will go to motion picture theatres whether times are good or bad.

Among the individual units, Fox Film was much in the public eye as a result of a series of events leading down from a change of control to General Theatres Equipment, Inc., withdrawal of the Government anti-Clayton act suit and shifting around the Loew's holdings to a change in the company's banking lineup and subsequent upheaval in the board of directors.

April, 1930, witnessed the closing scene in William Fox's dramatic battle to retain control of the enterprise he had built up from a nickelodeon to one of the biggest amusement units in the world when Fox Film Corporation passed into the hands of General Theatres.

Change of control took place through sales to General Theatres by William Fox of the latter's 50,101 shares of class B stock, together with the entire 100,000 shares of corresponding stock of Fox Theatres Corporation for a reported $16,000,000. Agreement with Fox at that time provided that he should remain with the company as a director and chairman of the advisory board for five years at an annual salary of $500,000.

At this time $55,000,000 notes were issued to provide for details connected with the change in control, which included transfer of control of Loew's, Inc., and flotation of this financing led to some interesting developments in the company's financial affairs when the notes became due a year later on April 15, 1931.

Following an audit of the company's books, Halsey, Stuart and Co., which became the company's principal bankers when control passed out of the hands of William Fox, withdrew from the syndicate negotiating the refunding operation to meet the $55,000,000 notes falling due and Chase Securities Corporation became the company's leading bankers.

Harley L. Clarke, president of Fox and General Theatres, then recommended a virtually new directorate to be voted on at the company's annual meeting, which was scheduled for April 15 but was postponed three times to June 10 due to delay in making up the annual report. New directors included members of the banking interests that replaced Halsey, Stuart and Company in Fox's affairs.

Withdrawal of the Government's anti-Clayton act suit which, was based on the acquisition by Fox of control of Loew's and which had been in litigation for more than two years, was a direct consequence of the refunding operation of April, 1931, in the process of which a new corporation was formed, known as the Film Securities Corporation.

Fox transferred to this new corporation its Loew's holdings consisting of 660,900 shares. Subsequently, it was reported, General Theatres Equipment purchased 100,000 shares of preferred stock of the Film Securities Corporation, the holding company for the Loew's stock.

Paramount, which set up for itself an enviable earnings record during the year, had its name changed in April, 1930, from Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation to Paramount Publix Corporation. The chief feature in the company's operations during the year was the strengthening of its financial position to where it was recognized as one of the most stable in the industry.

RKO is another company that has worked itself up into one of the leading positions in the business financially, a step that was furthered by the purchase, completed in January, 1930, of all the studios and principal assets of Pathe Exchange, Inc. Retaining only its 49 per cent interest in the Du Pont Pathe Film Manufacturing Company, Pathe sold these assets to RKO for $4,630,789, payable in notes maturing over a period of about five years. Outcome of the deal was formation of the RKO Pathe Company.

The long decline in stock market values since the autumn crash of 1929 took its toll among the motion picture shares, of course, but a significant change of financial opinion regarding the stocks of some of the leading companies has taken place as a result of the industry's demonstration of growing power and stability.

While the average motion picture stock is still given a speculative rating among the Wall Street fraternity, shares of a few major units have attracted an investment following as is attested by the increase in number of stockholders over a period of three or four years.

In comparison with the deflation in other groups of stocks over last year or so, the motion picture shares in most instances showed smaller depreciation in market value than most of the other leading groups and, when market conditions warranted, were quick to respond to any improvement in the general tone.

Fluctuations, of course, have depended largely on individual conditions. Thus, the recent difficulties in Fox affairs dropped the shares of that company and of General Theatres, together with affiliated bonds, to new record low levels, but it must be remembered that declines of this character occurred in a market when such premier and seasoned stocks as United States Steel were being forced down to new low ground and the general group of amusement shares suffered minor damage in comparison with other sections of the list.

Dividend payments on the stocks of leading motion picture enterprises have, of necessity, been cut, a step which has been found essential among shares of every other industry and mostly to a larger extent than was the case in the film group. The Warners dividend was passed in the fall of 1930 due to a large decrease in earnings, while Paramount cut its dividend from $4 to $2.50 annually in May, 1931. Downward revision of the Fox dividend was expected as the end of the first half approached.

In view of the general speculative cloudiness the outlook for picture stocks is naturally uncertain, but with most of the shares having about discounted the prospects of decreased earnings for 1931, it may reasonably be expected that the group will appreciate readily when general market conditions improve. Not a few of the shares have attracted large followings by the industry's growing powers and, with improvement in general business, these may be expected correspondingly to increase.

118,000 Stockholders

The motion picture industry now belongs to not less than 118,000 stockholders as indicated by a survey of the lists of leading enterprises completed in May, 1931. Thirty-five years ago the industry belonged to one man.

Increase in the number of stockholders has been specially marked in the last two years. Observers credit this increase to a number of influences; among them a considerable public recognition of the motion picture as among the more stable industries in a period when many classes of investment have been put to the test by the general business depression.

The continuous gain in the lists of stockholders has taken a market upturn since the advent of the sound picture, which with its revolution of the technology and equipment of the art has required large amounts of new capital. Also along with this development another influence has appeared in the policy of some of the major units to make acquisitions of theatres and other properties leading to expansion in the lists through exchanges of stock.

Thus, stockholders in five of the leading motion picture enterprises—RKO, Paramount, Warners, Fox and Eastman Kodak—increased from 49,258 in 1928 to 79,000 in 1929 and to the present total of approximately 112,000. Meanwhile, proportionate increases have taken place among less extensively capitalized companies, showing that public participation in the film industry has more than doubled in that short period.

Most rapid growth in the number of stockholders of the major units is shown by RKO. From a total of 1,500 in 1928, the number rose to about 10,000 in March, 1930, and, as a result of exchange of stock and issuance of rights, now stands at approximately 21,000, a gain since 1928 of some 19,500 stockholders.

Paramount has had a wide expansion in number of shareholders, as revealed by the latest annual report, which shows that at the end of 1930 these totaled almost 21,000. This compared with approximately 14,000 in 1929, 9,000 in 1928, 5,000 in 1927, 4,000 in 1926, 3,000 in 1925 and 2,000 in 1924. Again the sharp rise since 1928 is brought out, the number from that year to 1930 rising about 12,000, while the increase in the preceding four years was only 7,000.

Stockholders in Warner Bros. rose from 10,000 in 1928 to 32,167 in 1931, while Fox, early in 1928, had 758, jumping to 2,342 in October of the same year. In December, 1929, Fox books revealed 6,590 holders, increasing to 9,000 in April, 1930, and to 10,000 on April 15, 1931.

Eastman Kodak shareholders have shown a steady increase from 1923. At that time they amounted to about 10,000, from which the figure rose to 12,000 in 1924, 20,000 in 1925, 24,000 in 1926, 26,000 in 1927, 28,000 in 1928, 32,000 in 1929 and 34,000 in 1930.

The last couple of years also have shown a steady increase in number of stockholders in smaller units, including Columbia, Consolidated Film, Technicolor and Trans-Lux, indicating the investment and speculative fraternity is not blind to the motion picture industry's demonstration of comparative stability in the current business depression and, despite temporary setbacks, its future possibilities as a result of the recent trend toward stronger financial management in the major film companies.

FAMOUS PLAYERS-CANADIAN

Annual statement of Famous Players-Canadian Corp. shows gross operating income for the year ending August 30, of $4,268,893, almost $1,000,000 greater than last fiscal year, when $3,376,844 was earned.

Surplus amounted to $3,217,681, or $200,000 greater than the previous year's balance, due to sound installations. Approximately $2,000,000 was available for dividends.

RCA EARNINGS

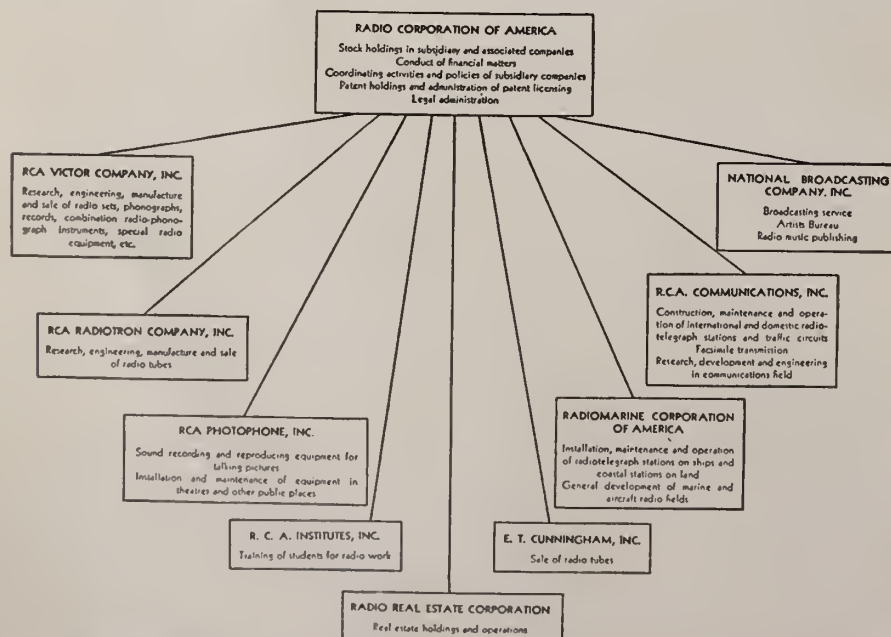

Earnings per share of Radio Corporation of America and subsidiaries for the first quarter of 1931 equaled those of the full year of 1930, with 2 cents a share for the period ended March 31. Net income for the three months was $1,566,519 after all charges such as depreciation, amortization and taxes, equal, after dividends on the "A" and "B" stocks, to 2 cents a share on the 13,160,750 shares of common outstanding.

Net income for 1930 amounted to $5,526,293, which was equal to 2 cents a share after preferred dividend requirements. The company did not publish its first quarter earnings last year.

The total gross earnings for the first 1931 quarter were $24,843,371 and the balance after all charges and dividends on A and B preferred was $263,647. The balance was carried to profit and loss surplus totaling $30,274,185 March 31 of this year, compared with $30,010,537 at the close of last year.

Over $20,000,000 is invested in the German film industry, according to a February estimate. The total increased about 2½ per cent in 1930.

RCA Organization Chart

1926 Sound pictures become a commercial reality as recorded and reproduced over the Western Electric System

1927 Dialogue is successfully synchronized with sight as the first Western Electric recorded all-talking picture is exhibited

1928 Leading producers contract to record by the Western Electric system exclusively

1929 ERPI's nation-wide service staff succeeds in reducing program interruptions at W-E equipped theatres to less than 1/10 of one percent of playing time

1930 Western Electric quality is made available to small theatres in new models distributed at from $2950 up.

Noiseless Recording

The greatest development since the introduction of talking pictures themselves . . . recording that does away with all ground and surface noises and gives only what the microphone was intended to record, with higher standards of quality.

Noiseless Recording is an outcome of the constant striving for perfection in the Western Electric Sound System. Pictures made by this new process are most profitably shown when reproduced over Western Electric Equipment.

Financial Earnings

The motion picture industry in four years has grossed $1,164,007,537, netting $287,364,607, based on income of 16 companies in the equipment and film fields.

The increase in 1930 over that of 1927 reached $253,866,704 gross income, or from $168,060,696 for 1927 to $421,927,400 for 1930, establishing a record which by far surpassed any other major industry. Net income of the industry rose $49,614,997, from $45,218,670 in 1927 to $94,833,067 for 1930.

Gross earning of Paramount and Eastman Kodak, which are not revealed in company financial reports, would swell the four-year total to about $1,500,000,000, on the basis of an estimated $770,000,000 gross for 1930.

Successive expansion in earning power was climaxed in 1930 when the combined group reached its peak, doubly remarkable in view of business recession which generally played havoc with net and gross earnings of practically every other line of business activity.

While financial circles admit an expected recession from last year in 1931 the 1930 results clearly indicate that motion picture earnings have been sufficiently powerful to resist reactionary influences of the business depression longer than any other large industry, with but one exception, and that of public utilities. By being aligned with the public utility group in this depression-proof category, the industry once again throws sharply into relief the fact that its product has become a most important every-day necessity, which is further borne out by theatre attendance records during periods of economic setbacks.

For 1927, nine leading film companies reported gross income of $168,060,696, while 12 companies reported $236,084,596 for 1928 and an equal number reported $337,934,845 for 1929 and $421,927,400 for 1930.

The figures would be swelled many additional millions were gross income included of major units which do not publish gross earnings, notably Paramount and Eastman Kodak.

Net income for 1927, as reported by 12 companies, was $45,218,670, while 15 companies reported $56,253,716 for 1928. For 1929, 16 companies had net of $91,059,154, while an equal number reported $94,833,067 for 1930.

Enviably earnings increases were marked up by major units of the industry in the four-year period, the compilation shows. While the 1930 report for Fox has not yet been issued, the company's gross for that year has been estimated at $102,000,000 and met at $13,000,000. This compares with $40,068,258 and $9,469,051, respectively, in 1929, $29,328,690 and $5,957,218 in 1928 and $22,847,132 and $8,120,557 in 1927.

RKO increased its gross from $42,624,965 in 1928 to $71,357,831 in 1930 and the net from $877,334 to $3,385,628. Warners, Loew's, Paramount and MGM were among the other large gainers in the four-year period.

REPORTS

CONSOLIDATED FILM INDUSTRIES

Report of Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., for the year ended December 31, 1930, shows net profit of $2,309,311 after depreciation, federal taxes, etc., equivalent under the participating provisions of the shares, to $2.86 a share on the average combined 806,243 shares of $2 no-par participating preferred and common stocks outstanding during the year and to $2.49 a share on 924,973 combined shares outstanding at end of the year. This compares with $2.389,373 or $3.41 a share in 1929 on 700,000 combined shares outstanding at end of that year.

Total sales in 1930 were $9,665,317, almost identical with the 1929 gross, yet Consolidated spent approximately $340,000 more for costs, expenses, depreciation, etc., in 1930 than in 1929. Total income for 1930 reached $2,730,940, as against $2,810,867 in 1929, "deductions" and federal taxes bringing the net intake $70,000 lower in 1930 than for the previous year.

At December 31, 1930, the company's assets totaled $6,116,899 and current liabilities, $1,995,308, a ratio of current assets to current liabilities slightly in excess of three to one. This compares with current assets of $4,967,529 against current liabilities of $2,375,478 on December 31, 1929, or a ratio of slightly better than two to one existing at that date.

Among the outstanding projects was the undertaking of construction of Safety First Film Laboratory at Fort Lee, N. J.

In October, 1930, the corporation acquired all of the preferred stock and over 99 per cent of the common of American Record Corp., which is engaged in the manufacture of popular priced phonograph records and other moulded products. The net worth of this company at the time of its acquisition was $2,306,592, in exchange for which the corporation gave to the stockholders of American Record, 124,973 shares of its common stock.

American Record manufactures the following brand of records, obtainable in most chain stores: Perfect, Banner, Regal, Romeo, Jewel, Challenge and Conqueror.

Cinema Patents Co., Inc., was organized in 1930 and is a wholly owned subsidiary. Consolidated states that "this company owns and controls basic patents covering practically all developing and processing machines, appliances or apparatus used or employed in this branch of the motion picture industry. Since its incorporation, some of the largest interests in the motion picture industry have signed contracts with the Cinema Patents, which provide substantial royalty payments; and negotiations are now in process towards the end that all the companies using machines or apparatus coming within the scope of our patents, shall pay royalties to Cinema Patents. Patents are basic and involve a fundamental arm of the industry."

EASTMAN KODAK

With the exception of the record-breaking year of 1929, all previous annual earnings were surpassed by Eastman Kodak in 1930.

Net income amounted to $20,353,789, equal to $8.84 a share on the common, compared with $22,004,916, or $9.57 a share in the previous year. Total surplus at the end of 1930 aggregated $84,675,404, against $82,780,537 at the close of 1929.

A generally strong condition was revealed in the balance sheet, which showed total assets of $167,135,319 at December 27, 1930, compared with $163,467,508 at the end of 1929. Current assets of $86,559,184 compared with current liabilities of $13,415,573, while at the close of 1929 current assets were $93,764,138, against current liabilities of $15,134,401.

Preferred dividends paid by the company during 1930 amounted to $369,942, the same as in 1929, while common stock dividends amounted to $17,861,380, compared with $16,858,112 in the previous year. The company has no bonded debt.

PARAMOUNT

Net profits of $18,381,000 in 1930 by Paramount Public Corporation are shown by the annual statement. The record earnings for 1930 were 18 per cent ahead of 1929, previous record year, when the net reached $15,544,000, and are more than double the 1928 net of $8,713,000. Earnings of 1930 equalled $6.15 per share. Fourth quarter profit equalled $1.55 per share. Comparison of profits per share yearly since 1928 follows:

Year	Profits	Av. No. Shares Outstanding	Earnings Per Share
1930	$18,381,178	$2,986,829	$6.15

Consolidated Balance Sheet of Consolidated Film Industries, Inc.
as of December 31, 1928-29-30, follows:

approximately 66 per cent of its net income and its earned surplus account increased from $26,764,000 at the end of 1929 to $33,004,000 at the end of 1930.

All items in the asset column of the balance sheet showed increases over 1929 and 1928, current assets rising to $39,579,378 from $37,053,395 at the end of 1929, and $35,312,723 at the close of 1928. Net working capital gained from $22,092,712 at the end of 1929 to $23,497,831 on December 27, 1930.

In spite of increased taxes and appearance of additional items in the liabilities column, total current liabilities rose only $1,120,864 during 1930 and the ratio of current assets to current liabilities at the end of the year 1930 was 2.46 to 1, against 2.47 to 1 at December 28, 1929.

Maintains Strong Position

Paramount has maintained the strong working capital position which it has built up over the last few years by the policy of making most of its acquisitions through share exchanges, thus conserving cash and other assets to the fullest extent. During 1930, property and plant account was heavily added to, fixed assets at the end of the year totaling $233,419,188, compared with $174,838,176 at the end of 1929 and $106,872,337 at the close of 1928.

Total assets of $306,269,158 at the end of 1930 compared with $236,710 at the end of 1929 and $170,631,704 at December 29, 1928. Decreases in accounts payable, money due to subsidiaries, purchase money obligations, serial payments and appropriated surplus were shown in the liability column.

Although net profit for 1930 established a new high record, per share earnings were slightly smaller, amounting to $6.15 a share in 1930, against $6.36 a share in 1929, due to a larger number of shares outstanding. Consolidated earned surplus at the end of the year amounted to $33,004,167, against $26,764,025 last year.

Funded Debt Increased

Funded debt of the corporation increased during 1930 as a result of the issuance in August of $15,000,000 20-year 5½ per cent sinking fund gold bonds for the purpose of providing funds for theatre acquisitions. In 1930 Paramount's subsidiaries acquired additional theatre interests in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Massachusetts and Connecticut.

In addition, consolidated subsidiaries started operation of 19 theatres newly constructed in 1930 with a total seating capacity of 33,000, while partially owned companies opened seven newly built houses seating 12,000. By the end of the year Paramount and affiliates operated theatres in 422 cities and towns in 44 states.

Foreign distribution made the best showing in the company's history, the report said, gaining nearly 20 per cent over 1929, the previous record year. This resulted in construction of a studio in Paris and, in conjunction with the New York and Hollywood studios, productions were made in French, German, Spanish, Italian, Swedish, Hungarian, Czechoslovakian and other languages, totaling 96 features and 96 shorts.

Consolidated Income

The profit and loss account and balance sheet, respectively, for the first time disclosed profits of $31,000,000 before Federal taxes and depreciation of fixed assets and a segregation of fixed assets into two items—the first, "Land," carried at $69,000,000, and the second, "Building, Leases and Equipment," carried at $138,000,000 after depreciation. Depreciation against fixed assets amounted to $12,400,000 for the year, $1,700,000 of which was capitalized and written off as film exhaustion.

Comparative consolidated income account for the past three years follows:

Operating	Dec. 27, '30	Dec. 28, '29	Dec. 29, '28
Profit	$31,130,374	Not stated	$15,300,525

Balance	$18,381,178	$15,544,544	$8,713,063

Paramount's list of holders has increased from approximately 12,500 in 1929 to 20,778 at the end of 1930, an increase of 13,000, the largest for any year of the company's operation.

Stockholders now on Paramount's books are located in every state of the Union and 23 foreign countries and U. S. possessions, further indicating that the public's interest in amusements and its stock issues is widespread.

Approximately 2,000 stockholders were listed on the books of Paramount at the end of 1924, indicating a 19,000 increase in six years. Between 1924 and 1927, the increase was slow, the number only jumping in that period from 2,000 to 4,200. Following years, however, saw a sensational rise, with the list increasing from 8,050 at the end of 1928 to 14,000 at the close of 1929.

RKO

RKO's financial statement for 1930 revealed a net profit for 1930 of $3,385,628, after all charges and taxes. This compares with a 1929 net of $1,669,564, and a net loss of $45,743 in 1928. The 1928 loss, however, would have mounted considerably higher if the company had not benefited by a "non-recurring" profit of $1,134,827, earned when Keith-Albee-Orpheum sold a large block of Pathe stock which at that time was being carried on the books with the value of $1. It was marketed at approximately $8.50 per share, bringing $1,134,827.

More than $2,000,000 of the total net is understood to have been earned by the company's film interests, RKO-Radio Pictures, theatres contributing the rest.

RKO's theatres grossed $50,646,182 in admissions in 1930, while the cost of vaudeville, film rentals, salaries and other expenses at company houses amounted to $30,500,450. Other charges bring the net income from theatres down to approximately $1,385,000, according to an analysis. The film company grossed $16,466,344 on film rentals, but spent $10,083,634 to make pictures and $3,141,490 in distribution. The result is a $2,000,000 net on picture operations.

Radio-Pathe refinancing does not in any way enter the financial picture of the parent Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation in its current financial sheet. The Pathe deal was closed after RKO's fiscal year had expired on December 31, 1930.

The $3,385,628 net is an increase of $1,716,064 over the 1929 net of $1,669,564 and represents a jump exceeding 102 per cent.

RKO, however, computes the gain to be nearly 193 per cent, arriving at this figure by including in the 1929 net an item totalling $525,035, representing non-operating profits, as against a similar item of $36,197 in the 1930 statement.

In 1930, the company earned $1.45 per share on each of the 2,328,250 shares of Class A outstanding in "public" hands at the end of the company's financial year. The A outstanding totals 2,381,398 shares of which 53,148 were in the corporation's treasury. In 1929, only 92 cents per share was earned on the 1,808,409 Class A shares outstanding.

It is estimated that the total value of RKO stock in the hands of the public, at current market prices, was more than $46,000,000 on March 15, 1931.

The total gross in 1930 reached $71,357,831; in 1929, RKO grossed $51,696,860, and in 1928, $42,624,964.

Expenses and operating costs for 1930, 1929 and 1928, respectively, were: $62,474,604, or an operating profit of $8,883,227 in 1930; $46,080,872, representing an operating profit of $5,615,988 in 1929; and $39,506,090, or an operating profit of $3,118,874 in 1928. The operating profit in 1930, therefore, increased $5,764,353 over 1928.

RKO and its subsidiaries, at the close of the last fiscal year, are said to have had cash on hand totalling $2,536,145. This compares with $1,490,404 at the end of 1929, and $1,589,546 on the corresponding 1928 date.

Not a dollar was received from investments or advances in 1930, although $66,108 appeared in 1929 and $446,241 in 1928. However, the company paid out in investments and advancements to affiliated companies, a total of $3,963,297 in 1930, and nearly $5,500,000 in each of the two preceding years. "Other investments and deposits" in 1930 cost $5,253,581, as compared with $3,643,564 and $2,376,935 in 1929 and 1928, respectively.

Federal taxes jumped from $69,000 in 1928 to $250,000 in 1929 and $575,000 in 1930.

Assets Total $117,796,076

RKO and all subsidiaries (with exception of RKO Pathe have combined assets of $117,796,076. In 1929, assets were $91,163,087 and, in 1928, $71,397,699, which represents an increase of $46,000,000 in assets in three years.

An unusual revelation is made in the comparison of certain 1930 entries with 1928, when the financial sheet of the latter period revealed $330,000 due to officers, while on the 1930 statement, $23,988 is listed as being due from officers.

An inventory of $8,842,114 on the 1930 balance sheet was revealed in the analysis as being high for RKO. More than $3,230,000 of this figure is represented by "productions in progress." "Cimmarron," however, was listed in that entry to the amount of $1,000,000.

PATHE

Pathe (now RKO Pathe) showed a net loss of $1,043,267 for the 40-week period ended October 4, 1930, on a gross sales and rental intake reaching well over $11,200,000. In the same period in 1929, Pathe had a net profit of $554,231.

Ratification by stockholders at a meeting in January, 1931, gave company executives the final word on the sale of all Pathe assets to RKO for $4,630,789.

Net loss for the third quarterly period, the twelve weeks beginning October 4, 1930, reached $386,236, the financial statement revealed. This includes profit and loss credits in the amount of $57,714, representing income on pictures which were previously the subjects of charges to surplus and/or special reserve because of excessive book values as of April 21, 1928. The net loss for these 12 weeks compares with a net profit of $29,894 in the 12 weeks ending Oct. 5, 1929, in which period there was charged against surplus and/or special reserve $129,397 in excessive book value of pictures as of April 21, 1928.

Net profit or loss is after all charges, including provision for depreciation interest, taxes, amortization of debt discount and organization expenses, etc.

The figures on the forty-week loss of $1,043,267 included profit and loss credits in the amount of $154,451, representing income on pictures which were previously the subject of charges to surplus and/or special reserve because of excessive book values as of April 21, 1928. The net loss for these 40 weeks compares with a net profit of $554,231.01 in the 40 weeks ending October 5, 1929, in which period there was charged against surplus and/or special reserve $964,313.11 in excessive book value of pictures as of April 21, 1928.

UNIVERSAL

Net loss of $2,047,821 was reported by Universal in the financial statement for the year ended Nov. 1, 1930. The report, which covers the parent company and its 43 subsidiaries, foreign and domestic, reveals total gross income of $25,319,119, as compared with $29,111,380 in 1929, and $27,180,352 in 1928.

The two-million 1930 loss compares with net profit of $491,358 in 1929, and $1,004,645 in 1928.

When color-musicals fell from favor with the public in the spring, the company took a loss of $1,000,000 on Paul Whiteman's "King of Jazz."

Almost simultaneously, the company met a serious obstacle in the nature of foreign antagonism to "All Quiet on the Western Front." Germany's ban lost $500,000 in gross rentals.

Another highly important item, which placed $700,000 on the red side of Universal's 1930 ledger, was the long-drawn out plagiarism suit brought by Anne Nichols on "Abie's Irish Rose," which, it was charged, formed the story basis of Universal's "Cobens and Kellys" feature series.

The suit cost Universal $200,000 to defend, of which sum only $20,000 was recouped when the court awarded that sum to Carl Laemmle's company as "additional counsel fees." The charges of Miss Nichols fell flat, and Universal was the victor. The financial statement, therefore, included an item of $500,000, which was ordered held in escrow pending a decision in the $3,000,000 action. The favorable decision came too late for crediting the $500,000 on the 1930 statement. The half-million will be transferred to surplus on the 1931 statement.

These more or less uncontrollable factors which influenced the unfavorable report represent a total of $1,680,000, all helping to mount the net loss to $2,047,821.

In 1930, Universal's film rentals of $22,107,522 were divided as follows: gross from domestic market, $13,778,529; foreign rentals, $8,328,993. The foreign intake, therefore, was 30 per cent of the total grossed, a surprisingly large amount in view of the general impression prevalent in the industry that foreign markets had dwindled to practically nothing since sound's invasion.

Nearly half of $971,965 or $422,658, obtained in accessory sales, was realized abroad. The domestic intake on accessories totaled $549,307. Universal's accessory intake is understood to be proportionately larger than many of the other major distributors.

Although Universal has sub-leased all but two of its string of "exploitation-show window" theatres here and abroad, the company grossed $2,239,631 in 1930 from rentals on these leases, and from box-office intakes of the two houses still operated directly, the Alhambra at Milwaukee, and Rialto, Washington.

A total of $15,376,790 is charged off under "cost of sales and service" to "film exhaustion and expense." This represents the cost of making pictures, plus the cost written off immediately upon completion, before a dollar is earned, on all pictures costing less than $500,000. Universal is practically the only large producer-distributor which still adheres to the old method of writing off negative charges before they begin to earn. The 1930 cost of "sales and service" is only $200,000 in excess of 1929, but is $2,000,000 more than in 1928.

The company spent $7,668,962 for operation of foreign and domestic exchanges, the latter costing $4,961,742, of which $797,310 was paid to the three independent exchanges which distribute "U" product. Foreign exchange expenses were $2,707,220. In 1929, exchanges and distribution cost $8,850,188, and in 1928, $8,487,654, indicating economies in 1930.

First preferred dividends in 1930 totaled $175,448, as compared with $186,330 paid in 1929, and $191,928 in 1928.

Total deficit, after payment of preferred dividends in 1930 was $2,223,269. This compares with a $305,330 surplus in 1929, and a $812,717 surplus in 1928.

Total assets at the close of the last fiscal year were represented by $17,077,670. In 1929, the company had assets totaling $19,372,184, in 1928, $20,512,471, and in 1927, $19,384,268.

Although cash on hand as of Nov. 1, 1930, totaling $959,575, was considerably lower than on the corresponding date in 1929, when the company had $1,385,651, it is higher than for similar periods in 1928 and 1927, when Universal had cash of $875,090, and $880,461, respectively.

The sale of Universal's laboratory to H. J. Yates, of Consolidated Film Industries netted a profit of $616,372 over and above the book value of the plant. This sale was made, it is said, to raise necessary immediate cash last year.

M. H. Aylesworth, president of National Broadcasting Company, in his annual report to the advisory council, stated that more than 2,000,000 letters were received from the radio audience in 1930, an increase of at least 1,000,000 over 1929. Gross revenue for the year amounted to $22,000,000, compared with $15,000,000 in 1929. There were 263 sponsors who used the company's network during the period.

The completion of the new studios in Chicago offers provision for the time when television emerges from the laboratory and becomes an accomplished fact. Six stations were added to the three networks operated by N. B. C., bringing the total to 74, requiring 34,500 miles of program wire lines.

LOEW'S EARNINGS

Comparative earning statement of Loew's Incorporated, for the 28 weeks ended March 13, 1931, showed a loss over the corresponding period last year of $1,363,624, the two figures being $8,243,584 for 1930 and $6,879,960 for 1931.

The same period of 1929 showed a net

STRONG WORKING CAPITAL IS INDUSTRY'S PRESENT BOON

The motion picture business as a whole is currently in the strongest working capital position in its history, according to a compilation by Motion Picture Herald including April, 1931.

The film industry was then operating with a net working capital of approximately $214,174,710, the compilation shows. This is an increase of $4,487,836 over 1929 working capital and $36,400,144 above the figures for 1928, when capitalization of most units first started taking on major proportions.

The compilation, based on the latest balance sheets of fifteen motion picture producing, distributing and exhibiting companies, shows four of the units increased their working capital in both years, while two showed successive declines in this all-important item on the balance sheet.

Eight of the companies in their latest reports showed gains over 1929 and an equal number had larger net working capital in 1930 than in 1928. Four companies' working capital decreased from 1928 to 1929 but subsequently picked up in substantial volume.

Warner Bros., which in 1928 reported net current liabilities of $1,525,827, had net working capital of $11,323,401 in 1929 and $12,507,630 in 1930. Eastman Kodak's working capital increased $27,862,000 from 1928 to 1929 showing the largest individual gain in the compilation, but fell off in the following year.

Radio-Keith-Orpheum, whose working capital in 1928 amounted to only $2,015, showed $3,618,674 in 1929 and $9,498,134 in the latest report. Net working capital of Loew's, Inc., dropped $9,294,913 from 1928 to 1929, but gained $3,110,185 in the subsequent year.

Another company whose working capital increased in 1930 was Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which lost from 1928 to 1929 but in the next year increased $4,942,964 to $3,497,337 above the 1928 figures. Paramount Publix increased its working capital from $22,092,712 in 1929 to $23,497,831 at the end of 1930, where it closely approximated the 1928 total.

Fox's working capital successively declined, amounting to $18,465,861 in the latest balance sheet, compared with $22,909,917 in 1928. Figures for General Theatres

Universal's Profit

Universal and subsidiaries report a profit after all charges for the quarter ending January 31, of $1,045,326. This profit is described as abnormal due to the adoption by the company from November 1, 1930, of the standard method of write-off of picture costs by amortizing such costs over the income-producing life of the pictures. This change was started with the pictures of the present season's releases. There was, therefore, included in the income for the quarter ending January 31, revenue on pictures of prior season's releases, the costs of which already had been completely written off.

If the company had also revalued the prior season's release at November 1, 1930, it is stated, profit for the quarter ending January 31, would have been $90,432, and the surplus at the beginning of that quarter would have been increased by $1,165,342.

FOX

Fox Film's 1930 gross of $102,004,009, and a net operating profit of $10,251,827 broke all previous records, the increase being attributed in part by "acquisition of additional properties, but much more to the fundamental stability and steady growth of the industry."

"Hardly another industry of this magnitude could be mentioned in which growth has been so nearly uniform, or in which the ratio or gross income to costs has been so nearly constant," the report said. "The explanation of this experience undoubtedly lies in the fact that the industry satisfies universal human needs scarcely less essential than food and clothing. In fact, reports appear to indicate that the present depression has affected more seriously the demand for food and clothing than it has the demand for amusement, recreation and instruction."

The $102,004,009 gross for 52 weeks ended Dec. 27, 1930, compared with $83,184,112 for 1929, a net of $10,251,827 compares with $9,469,051, but an item of non-recurring expenses brought the net profit carried to surplus down to $9,205,434. This was equal to $3.64 a share on 2,525,660 shares of stock outstanding compared with $10.78 a share on 920,660 shares at the end of 1929. Net 1930 operating profit before non-recurring expenses amounted to $4.06 per share.

The much discussed differences in methods of writing off of production costs between the method used by Touche, Niven, the corporation's accountants and that employed by Price, Waterhouse, who represented the bankers in the April refinancing program are discussed by Harley L. Clarke, president of the corporation. He says:

"If the proposed new write-off table of Price, Waterhouse were used, the difference between amortization obtained and that set up by the company, as determined and certified by Touche, Niven, would be $894,261 for 1930, and the net would be reduced by this amount. It is to be noted, however, that the effect of the change would be simply to add to the write-off against the income during the past year and to decrease by the same amount the write-off to be deducted from the income of subsequent years."

Consolidated Detailed Statement of Profit and Loss For the Year Ending December 31, 1930

INCOME:
Theatre admissions.....	$50,646,182.46
Film rentals and sales.....	16,466,344.56
Rents, concessions and other income.....	4,245,304.00	$ 71,357,831.02
EXPENSES:
Artists' salaries, other salaries and film service.....	$30,500,450.78
Cost of film sales and service.....	10,083,634.03
Film selling and general expenses.....	3,141,490.67
Other operating and general expenses.....	18,749,028.37	$ 62,474,603.85
		$ 8,883,227.17

This would reduce the net to $8,311,173. Amortization, as contained in the Touche, Niven report, amounted to $27,305,357, compared with $24,158,544 in 1929 and depreciation on plant and equipment, exclusive of studio property, was $3,875,560, against $2,678,761.

Other differences between the company's report and that prepared for the bankers were the methods of auditing depreciation and including subsidiaries. Regarding depreciation the difference between the basis used by the company and that of the bankers amounted to $805,607 for 1930. The company's method of including assets and liabilities of subsidiaries in the balance sheet has been to carry its interest in all properties not 100 per cent owned as investments. If properties more than 85 per cent owned were included, as in the bankers' audit, the property account would be increased by $2,500,000 and the funded debt by $1,700,000.

In the income account the company includes all American subsidiaries controlled regardless of the percentage of ownership, while the bankers' audit includes the proportionate part of net profits of companies in which Fox's interest exceeded 50 per cent. In the case of companies owning 50 per cent or less the bankers' report included only those actually received by Fox as dividends.

Readjusting the surplus and profit and loss statement to the accounting principles of the bankers' auditors, Touche, Niven reported a reduction in earned surplus of about $6,047,169, of which $2,688,974 is applicable to 1930 and $3,358,195 to prior years. After deduction of $2,688,974 from the 1930 profit, this would leave $6,516,461, or $2.58 a share on the stock.

Explaining the company's stand on the two methods of amortization controversy over which de'ayed the annual report almost two months, the report said the company continued to write off its inventory during 1930 in exact harmony with the method recommended and accepted by public accountants for the sound films released in 1929.

"In spite of the substantial values of many pictures long after the 52 weeks of 'life' accorded them," the report said, "it is now the practice of Fox Film to write off completely the cost of all feature pictures at the close of 52 weeks after their domestic and foreign release dates."

The item "non-recurring expenses" in the income account also came in for an explanation in the report. This, the report said, includes a considerable number of expenses which the management has cleared up and disposed of, some of which could have been written off at the close of the preceding year. The largest item ($382,622), the report said, consists of abandoned unprofitable theatre leases, while the remainder is made up of organization expenses, salaries in discontinued departments, fire losses, legal fees, and royalty and contract settlements of prior years.

A comparison of the company's balance sheet as of Dec. 27, 1930, with that of June 30, 1930, and that of Dec. 28, 1929, shows a steady increase in total assets, the latest figures for this item being $201,354,475.50, compared with $192,524,313 on June 30, and $124,243,716 on Dec. 28, 1929.

in the year. At the end of 1929 Fox had an excess of more than $19,000,000 in current liabilities over current assets, while as of Dec. 27, 1930, there was a net working capital of $15,494,118. Cash on hand at the end of 1930 amounted to $5,308,942, which, while off slightly from the June 30, 1930, figure, showed a substantial increase over the $2,492,599 cash reported as of December 28, 1929.

During the year, the report states, the production department of the business was put under budget control for the first time, and savings of at least $3,000,000 were expected to result therefrom in 1931.

During 1930, Fox Film declared dividends at the rate of $4 a year a share, totaling $10,102,240. This amount was barely covered by net operating profit before non-recurring charges, but is not covered by net after that charge. Further, it is $3,585,778 over the income if it had been calculated on the basis suggested by the bankers' accountants.

In recent years Fox has had an even more rapid increase in theatre receipts than it has had in film rentals. The following table gives an outline of the growth of this part of the Fox business so far as it relates to American theatres:

Year	No. Theatres	Gross Receipts
1927	2	$ 2,054,700
1928	249	33,923,783
1929	455	39,962,044
1930	532	51,414,002

This gives the number of theatres controlled by Fox Film but does not include theatres operated by Fox Theatres Corp., an affiliated company. The last column includes the receipts only from the dates of control of the various theatres and hence not necessarily the total receipts of the theatres during the year. The corporation owned or had an important interest in 1,013 theatres of which 532 are in the United States, 395 in Great Britain and 86 in Australia. (Fox Theatres properties are in addition.)

Revenues from Movietone News and the other Fox news services increased 21 per cent in 1930 over 1929, and 14 per cent during the first three months of 1931, as compared with the corresponding period of 1930.

Investments in Movietone City, the Hollywood studio, laboratory, studios of the Movietone News, and the home office in New York exceed $14,750,000.

The total number of employees in all its departments is now 12,888.

The total cost of administration and the distribution of films has been a steadily declining percentage of film rentals, with the lowest relative costs last year in the history of your company. In 1930 the administration and distribution costs were more than 45 per cent lower in comparison with film rentals than they were in 1925," Clarke stated.

In this report there is a condensed consolidated statement of profit and loss. The first item of $96,446,346 includes $45,032,344 received from film sales and rentals, about two-thirds of which was from domestic sources and about one-third from foreign sources. It also includes $51,414,002 from theatre receipts, of which there were minority interests in the case of 141 theatres. It will be observed that a minority interest in profits of $790,057 is deducted near the center of the statement.

The other items of income are self-explanatory with the exception of "Other income." This item consists of income from a great variety of sources, the largest of which is interest on bank deposits and payment discounts of bills for purchases, these two together amounting to nearly $300,000.

In the first deduction under "Expenses" the largest item is $44,440,870, the cost of operating the theatres, office buildings, technical laboratories, etc., of your company. The next largest item is the expense of maintaining film exchanges throughout the world.

"There is one remaining material difference between the audit as of September 27, 1930, and the present report," Clarke said. "Subsidiaries of Fox having acquired isolated and small groups of theatres at various times, inherited special accounting practices pertaining to these properties, among which was the custom in some of them of setting up depreciation on theatre equipment (not buildings) of from 15 per cent to 22.5 per cent per year. This is not only regarded as excessive for properties adequately maintained, as those operated by your company are maintained, but some of this property has already been fully depreciated, although it is yet in good condition and in use. Consequently, in its consolidated statement, your company sets up depreciation for these properties, until they are completely written off, at a rate of 10 per cent on their cost, or precisely the rate at which it sets up depreciation for other similar properties, and a rate that is common in the industry. The difference in depreciation between that on the basis used in this audit of September 27, 1930, and that in this report, as determined and certified to by Touche, Niven amounts to $805,607.

"There are no other differences of importance between the methods used in the audit as of September 27, 1930, and those used in the preparation of this report," he said. "It is the position of your company that its statement as here presented gives an accurate and true account of its operations during the period covered by this report and of its condition at its close. In any case, the difference taken from the profit of the past year would reduce by the same amount the deductions to be taken from the profit of subsequent years."

In connection with the annual statement, Touche, Niven, company auditors, stated that "Referring to the bankers' offering circular, dated April 10, 1931, relating to the issuance by Fox of five-year six per cent gold debentures in the principal amount of $30,000,000, we have made a supplementary examination of the books of the corporation with particular reference to the accounting principles adopted by the accountants, engaged on the special audit for the bankers, and find that the application of adjustments necessary to reflect the earnings on the basis adopted by the said accountants would involve a reduction in surplus, as at December 27, 1930, of approximately $6,047,169, of which $2,688,973.92 is applicable to the year (52 weeks) then ended, and $3,358,195.08 is applicable to surplus at the beginning of the year, comprising, respectively, the following items:

In the assets side of the balance sheet, the items listed under "Current Assets" are self-explanatory with the exception of "Inventories" which has been discussed in earlier paragraphs.

The major item included under "Investments securing 6 per cent gold notes" is the investment in Loew's were transferred to Film Securities April 15, 1931, and in connection with this financing the holdings of stock by Fox to Loew's, were transferred to Film Securities Corp., in consideration of which Fox received $28,800,000 in cash and 462,000 shares of the Class Securities has outstanding senior to the Class A stock $20,000,000 two-year 6 per cent Secured gold notes and 100,000 shares outstanding shares of Class A stock. Film of $7 Dividend Cumulative Preferred stock. A stock of Film Securities, being all the The only other item under this head is the investment in theatre properties in England, amounting to $19,030,929.

The item "Investments in respect of which proportionate shares of profits are included" consists of the investment in theatres in the United States. The item "Other Investments" consists largely of an investment in Fox Hearst Corp. and investments in foreign theatres. The item "Land, buildings, leaseholds, equipment, furniture and fixtures" includes over $14,750,000 invested in studios, home office and laboratories, and over $34,500,000 in theatre properties. All these values in fixed assets are after the deduction of reserves for depreciation of over $13,900,000. The item "Deferred charges" consists of bond discount and uncompleted projects.

All items listed under "Current liabilities" are self-explanatory. The secured 6 per cent gold notes, referred to under liabilities to be refinanced, were retired on April 15, 1931, from the proceeds of the sale of $30,000,000 five-year 6 per cent convertible gold debentures and from the funds secured as a partial consideration for the transfer of Fox's interest in Loew's, to Film Securities. The note payable of Wesco Corp. was paid from part of the proceeds of the sale of $15,000,000 two-year 6 per cent gold notes of Wesco. The portion of the funded debt maturing in 1931 is also to be retired partially from the proceeds of the same financing. The item "Funded debt of subsidiary companies" consists of the funded debt maturing later than 1931.

The item "Appropriation from surplus" is a temporary reserve for realization of inventories, set aside from earned surplus on the advice of the auditors to reflect the possibility that unexpected economic conditions during the natural life of the films may result in their bringing in less than the normal rentals for such pictures. At the close of the period this appropriation will be returned to earned surplus, and it will in no way affect future earnings of the company.

In State Legislatures

More than 200 bills adverse to the motion picture industry were defeated in legislatures of 44 states at sessions that convened after January 1, 1931. These bills included tax, censorship and blue law measures.

Not only were Sunday closing bills defeated but in at least five states the public's legislative representatives displayed their trend toward liberalism by adopting bills granting shows on the Sabbath. States included are New Mexico, Arkansas, Maryland (for Baltimore only, with a referendum to be held), Ohio, and Idaho. Several cities were granted home rule on the question.

Forty-four states were included in the April survey. Twenty of these legislatures adjourned without passing any adverse legislation. At the time of the survey there was no apparent danger in 11 other states. In 13 states serious matters were pending.

Bill for 15 Millions

The industry owes $15,000,000 to Electrical Research Products as the balance for theatre and studio sound equipment. The original bill for work by Erpi in switching the industry from silent to sound is understood to have reached between $22,000,000 and $25,000,000. This sum does not embrace service charges, it is said, which approximate $5,000,000 yearly. Nor does it include charges for parts.

The $25,000,000 sum is payable on a partial payment plan covering a period of ten years, at which time the equipment reverts to the Western Electric subsidiary.

The table cannot include the pictures released in 1930 because they are still being exhibited. In fact, on the date of this report 20 pictures had not been released in foreign countries, from which 33 per cent total gross rentals are received.)

A CODE REGULATING PRODUCTION OF MOTION PICTURES

{Formulated by the Association of Motion Picture Producers, Inc., and the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America, Inc.}

Motion pictures recognize the high trust and confidence which have been placed in them by the people of the world and which have made motion pictures a universal form of entertainment.

They recognize their responsibility to the public because of this trust and because entertainment and art are important influences in the life of a nation.

Hence, though regarding motion pictures primarily as entertainment without any explicit purpose of teaching or propaganda, they know that the motion picture within its own field of entertainment may be directly responsible for spiritual or moral progress, for higher types of social life, and for much correct thinking.

During the rapid transition from silent to talking pictures they have realized the necessity and the opportunity of subscribing to a Code to govern the production of talking pictures and of reacknowledging this responsibility.

On their part, they ask from the public and from public leaders a sympathetic understanding of their purposes and problems and a spirit of cooperation that will allow them the freedom and opportunity necessary to bring the motion picture to a still higher level of wholesome entertainment for all the people.

General Principles

1. No picture shall be produced which will lower the standards of those who see it. Hence the sympathy of the audience should never be thrown to the side of crime, wrong-doing, evil or sin.

2. Correct standards of life, subject only to the requirements of drama and entertainment, shall be presented.

3. Law, natural or human, shall not be ridiculed, nor shall sympathy be created for its violation.

Particular Applications

I.—CRIMES AGAINST THE LAW.

These shall never be presented in such a way as to throw sympathy with the crime as against law and justice or to inspire others with a desire for imitation.

1. Murder.

a. The technique of murder must be presented in a way that will not inspire imitation.

b. Brutal killings are not to be presented in detail.

c. Revenge in modern times shall not be justified.

2. Methods of crime should not be explicitly presented:

a. Theft, robbery, safe-cracking, and dynamiting of trains, mines, buildings, etc., should not be detailed in method.

b. Arson must be subject to the same safeguards.

c. The use of firearms should be restricted to essentials.

d. Methods of smuggling should not be presented.

3. Il'egal drug traffic must never be presented.

4. The use of liquor in American life, when not required by the plot or for proper characterization, will not be shown.

II.—SEX. The sanctity of the institution of marriage and the home shall be upheld. Pictures shall not infer that low forms of sex relationship are the accepted or common thing.

1. Adultery, sometimes necessary plot material, must not be explicitly treated, or justified, or presented attractively.

2. Scenes of passion.

a. They should not be introduced when not essential to the plot.

b. Excessive and lustful kissing, lustful embracing, suggestive postures and gestures, are not to be shown.

c. In general, passion should be so treated that these scenes do not stimulate the lower and baser element.

3. Seduction or rape.

a. They should be never more than suggested, and only when essential for the plot, and even then never shown by explicit method.

b. They are never the proper subject for comedy.

4. Sex perversion or any inference to it is forbidden.

5. White slavery shall not be treated.

6. Miscegenation (sex relationships between the white and black races) is forbidden.

7. Sex hygiene and venereal diseases are not subjects for motion pictures.

8. Scenes of actual child birth, in fact or in silhouette, are never to be presented.

9. Children's sex organs are never to be exposed.

III.—VULGARITY. The treatment of low, disgusting, unpleasant, though not necessarily evil, subjects should be subject always to the dictate of good taste and a regard for the sensibilities of the audience.

IV.—OBSCENITY. Obscenity in word, gesture, reference, song, joke or by suggestion (even when likely to be understood only by part of the audience) is forbidden.

V.—PROFANITY. Pointed profanity (this includes the words, God, Lord, Jesus, Christ—unless used reverently—Hell, S. O. B., damn, Gawd), or every other profane or vulgar expression however used, is forbidden.

VI.—COSTUME.

1. Complete nudity is never permitted. This includes nudity in fact or in silhouette, or any lecherous or licentious notice thereof by other characters in the picture.

2. Undressing scenes should be avoided, and never used save where essential to the plot.

3. Indecent or undue exposure is forbidden.

4. Dancing costumes intended to permit undue exposure or indecent movements in the dance are forbidden.

VII.—DANCES.

1. Dances suggesting or representing sexual actions or indecent passion are forbidden.

2. Dances which emphasize indecent movements are to be regarded as obscene.

VIII.—RELIGION.

1. No film or episode may throw ridicule on any religious faith.

2. Ministers of religion in their character as ministers of religion should not be used as comic characters or as villains.

3. Ceremonies of any definite religion should be carefully and respectfully handled.

IX.—LOCATIONS. The treatment of bedrooms must be governed by good taste and delicacy.

X.—NATIONAL FEELINGS.

1. The use of the Flag shall be consistently respectful.

2. The history, institutions, prominent people and citizenry of other nations shall be represented fairly.

XI.—TITLES. Salacious, indecent, or obscene titles shall not be used.

XII.—REPELLENT SUBJECTS. The following subjects must be treated within the careful limits of good taste:

1. Actual hangings or electrocutions as legal punishments for crime.

2. Third degree methods.

3. Brutality and possibly gruesome-ness.

4. Branding of people or animals.

5. Apparent cruelty to children or animals.

6. The sale of women, or a woman selling her virtue.

7. Surgical operations.

STUDIO INVESTMENTS

Studio investment of each major company swells the represented capital at Hollywood to an estimated increase of $110,655,000 in the past five years—Each company's share in the total of investment increase is presented together with the roster of the studio—More than one hundred stages are added as a direct result of the introduction of sound.

Two hundred millions of dollars is the estimated investment in motion picture properties, buildings and equipment in Hollywood, the capital of the film production investment in the United States, as a part of the world investment of two and a half billions in all phases of the industry and two billions in the United States.

In the past five years the industry has invested $110,655,000 in new property, buildings and equipment, this marking the greatest half-decade of expansion in history. It is estimated that during 1931 another $10,000,000 will be added to physical assets.

The figure of $110,655,000 includes only studios and does not take into consideration the capital invested by subsidiary and inter-related industries.

Charles Chaplin

Charles Chaplin has invested $50,000 in his studio over the five-year period. An additional $25,000 went for studio equipment. It is expected that during the coming year he will erect several new stages, and it also was reported that Chaplin would build a five-stage studio on another site.

Columbia

Columbia has spent $2,000,000 on its Gower street property, for building construction alone, and $1,500,000 for equipment. Additions of sound stages, laboratory buildings, cutting rooms, projection room, carpenter shops, mills, and electrical machine shops have been on the program.

Fox Studio Investment

Fox Film Corporation has invested $25,000,000 in Movietone City, and $2,500,000 more is being spent by this organization in the current three-months period. All of Movietone City, which lies in Westwood, has been constructed in two years.

Thirty-nine buildings have been constructed, and thirty-six more will be completed by December 1, 1931.

The property includes administration building, five sound stages, scenic studio, scenario studio, bungalows, test stage, music studio, dressing rooms, cutting rooms, generator plant, school, mill, property buildings, canvas shop, blacksmith and tin shop, wardrobe, plaster shop, miniature shop, sound device building, garage, police and fire departments, vaults, cafe and other smaller buildings.

Hal Roach

Hal Roach studios spent $150,000 for construction during the period and $350,000 for equipment. The majority was for sound stages.

It is interesting to note that sound has been responsible for most of the major construction operations, and that the greatest activity in development has been since the advent of talking pictures in 1927.

Mack Sennett

The Mack Sennett studios have been constructed entirely during the past five years and the outlay has included $2,000,000. There are 26 buildings on the Mack Sennett properties.

Since Pathe (now RKO Pathe) took over the De Mille studios at Culver City it has invested $1,250,000 in expansion and improvements. There are 66 acres of land, some of which has been purchased during the last five years and represents an investment of $95,000.

New building construction includes wardrobe, property and drapery departments, five sound stages, office building, dressing and store rooms.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is said to have spent $5,000,000 in five years, and the expansion program for this year, due to increased production, calls for the spending of at least $2,000,000 more. Foreign version pictures are mainly responsible for the enlarged 1931 plans.

Recent additions include six sound stages, remodeling of five other stages for sound reproduction, new projection and cutting rooms, an industrial center half a mile long and other smaller buildings.

Metropolitan

Metropolitan has put $1,000,000 into its Los Palmas avenue property. For 1931 the company planned the erection of a new administration building. Work of reconstruction of various buildings is completed or underway.

Paramount

Paramount-Publix Corporation is spending a large sum for the construction of a four-story administration building, two sound stages, assembly plant and several projection rooms. During five years, it has invested $20,000,000 in expansion. More than $2,000,000 recently was expended for 2,670 acres on Ventura boulevard. This is the world's largest acreage holding devoted to film work and owned by one motion picture company.

With two new sound stages, Paramount will have twelve.

Radio Pictures

Radio Pictures has spent $6,000,000 in construction during the period.

In addition to this, $3,000,000 has been invested in equipment. Approximately $1,000,000 will have been spent by the end of 1931 on the Gower street property. Construction work over the period includes administration building, makeup department and dressing room building, camera building, a cafe and six sound stages, and a film laboratory costing $750,000.

Tec-Art

Tec-Art has spent $200,000 in building and $400,000 in equipment. Several additional stages and office buildings are on the program this year.

Tiffany

Tiffany took over its present studios in 1927, with ensuing expenditures of $370,000 on new buildings and $485,000 in equipment. The 1931 plans called for the erection of two stages, an administration building with 36 offices, and a scene dock, involving the expenditure of $800,000.

United Artists

Seven sound stages, administration buildings, carpenter and electrical shops, wardrobe buildings and property shops and casting offices have been built at the United Artists properties during the five year period, at a cost of $1,500,000, and another million has been invested in equipment. Constant improvements are being made.

Warner-First National

During five years Warner Brothers has spent $17,000,000 which includes seven sound stages and technical equipment, and it is expected that millions more will be

STUDIO PERSONNEL ROSTER

The total number of individuals regularly employed in production at Hollywood has been estimated as high as 25,000, but the generally accepted figure is approximately 17,500 persons. Wide variations from this total occur according to the time of the production year, with its slowing down during the summer months.

Following is a listing and classification of regularly employed personnel of leading studios, including players:

Charles Chaplin

Charles Chaplin Productions, La Brea and De Longpre Avenue, Hollywood, regularly employ 40 persons.

The studio roster follows:

Three featured players, 1 contract player not featured, 1 director, 3 cameramen, 1 publicity man, 1 auditor, 3 administrative executives, 1 bookkeeper, 3 property men, 1 grip, 1 cutter, 1 writer, 3 transportation men, 2 gatemen, 4 carpenters, 2 laborers, 1 watchman, and 8 unclassified workers.

Universal City

Universal City, Cal., employs 1,250 persons.

Included on the Laemmle payroll are 4 stars, 7 featured players, 95 contract players, 100 sound men, 9 directors, 5 associate producers, 2 comedy supervisors, 1 serial supervisor, 26 cameramen, 300 clerks and employees of the business department, 200 technical workers, 16 writers, 50 transportation men, 600 gatemen, policemen, carpenters, laborers and watchmen, and 100 other workers.

Fox Film Corporation

Fox Film Corporation, Sunset boulevard and Western Avenue and at Fox Hills, Cal., at the beginning of 1931 had 2,100 employed. The list included 60 featured players, 150 contract players, 30 sound men, 24 directors, with 31 assistants and 2 second assistants, 5 supervisors, 72 cameramen, including first, second, assistant and still, 25 publicity employees, 2 auditors, 40 bookkeepers, 25 administration executives, 25 writers, 25 technical workers, 40 transportation men, 10 gatemen, 30 policemen, 500 carpenters, 200 laborers, 150 painters, 75 plasterers, 400 electricians, 20 grips, 25 sound cablemen, 50 wardrobe men, 6 special wardrobe men, 20 property men, and 100 miscellaneous workers.

RKO Pathe

RKO Pathe Studios at Culver City employs between 500 and 750 persons, the payroll range being due to temporarily slack or rush periods.

The lineup is as follows:

Twenty-seven featured and freelance players, 12 stars, 11 directors and 6 assistant directors, 15 cameramen, and 12 assistants, 7 publicity employees, 7 administration executives, 22 in the accounting department.

Twenty-three writers, 23 soundmen, 36 property men, 16 cutters and assistants, 7 laboratory employees, 2 construction engineers, 21 art department employees and draftsmen.

Thirteen unit managers and assistants, 4 casting office employees, 20 in the designing and wardrobe departments, 116 studio electricians, 40 painters, 58 grips, 285 carpenters and laborers, 38 in the police and fire patrol, and 62 miscellaneous in the operating department.

The remainder are bit players, extras and special workers.

Trem Carr

Trem Carr Pictures at 6048 Sunset boulevard, employs 60 persons regularly, including:

Three featured players, 5 soundmen, 3 directors, 2 supervisors, 6 cameramen, 1 publicity man, 1 auditor, 1 bookkeeper, 2 executives, 2 grips, 2 property men, 2 cutters, 3 writers, 3 transportation men, 1 gateman, 14 carpenters, 10 laborers, 1 watchman.

Educational Studios, 7250 Santa Monica boulevard, employs regularly 110 individuals.

Seven are in service of the sound department; one star is listed; there are 2 directors, 1 supervisor, 2 administrative executives, 3 bookkeepers, 1 auditor, 3 cameramen, 12 grips, 6 property men, 4 cutters, 2 projectionists, 2 artists, 8 painters, 3 mechanics, 4 transportation men, 1 gateman, 20 carpenters, 15 laborers, 2 watchmen, 1 janitor, 1 groundkeeper, 3 stenographers, 1 script clerk and 2 assistant directors.

Columbia

Columbia Pictures Corporation, 1438 Gower Street, regularly employs approximately 500 persons. Included on the list are 10 featured players, 6 stars, 4 others under contract, 50 soundmen, 6 directors, 3 supervisors, 12 cameramen, 4 publicity employees, 30 administration executives, bookkeepers and auditors, 150 technical workers, 8 writers, 10 transportation men, and from 200 to 800 manual workers as occasion arises.

Paramount West Coast Studios

The West Coast studios of Paramount Publix Corporation, 5451 Marathon street, employ 1900 on the average the year around. These include twelve stars, 50 featured players, 97 sound employees, 30 directors, 4 supervisors, 48 cameramen and assistants, 42 publicity employees, 47 accountants and clerical workers, 43 general office employees, 73 grips, 44 property men, 48 cutters, 134 stage electricians, 50 writers, 27 gatemen, police and watchmen, 199 carpenters, 167 laborers, 17 art plasterers, 25 property makers, 46 scenic department employees, 48 electrical construction men, 45 mechanics and 6 engineers, 50 in the transportation department.

Paramount New York Studio

Personal of the Paramount New York Studio averages 500 weekly. Players, directors and scenarists are exchanged with the Paramount Hollywood studio and the number varies almost from day to day. On March 18, 1931, for example, the stars assigned to the New York studio were Tallulah Bankhead, Clive Brook, Nancy Carroll, Maurice Chevalier, Claudette Colbert, Frederic March, and Smith and Dale; featured players were Miriam Hopkins, Frank Morgan, Ginger Rogers and Charlie Ruggles.

Western Electric recording equipment is used and the standard recording is on film.

Metropolitan

Metropolitan Sound Studios, at 1040 Las Palmas avenue, Hollywood, employs on an average 200 workers. The number of featured players varies with the number of pictures being made. None is on contract. The sound department employs 45; there are 10 directors, 14 cameramen, 2 in publicity department, 35 in administration, 8 technical workers, 12 writers, and 8 in the transportation department. The other workers are employed as watchmen, laborers, carpenters, gatemen, and so on.

Hal Roach

Hal E. Roach Studios, Culver City, employs approximately 150 at all times. In the production department there are 2 supervisors, 4 directors, 4 assistant directors, 3 cameramen with 2 assistants, and 3 starred players. There are 2 starred units, "Our Gang" and "Boy Friends." There are 2 persons in the casting department, 5 in wardrobe, 12 in property, 9 in electrical, 9 in transportation, 4 painters, 4 grips, and 10 carpenters, 1 artist. In the sound department are 12, in publicity 7, in operations 16, and in film laboratory, 12.

Radio Pictures

Radio Pictures at 780 Gower street, employs on an average of 2,000 persons throughout the year. There are 5 stars, 35 featured players, 9 contract players not featured, 34 in the sound department, 14 directors, 6 associate producers, 39 cameramen, 15 in publicity department, 50 in administration department, 125 technical workers, 18 writers, 17 in transportation department, 7 gatemen, 15 police, 53 carpenters, 82 laborers, and 17 watchmen. The others are extras and unclassified workers.

UNSEEN WORKERS

Whenever Norma Shearer, Gary Cooper, Greta Garbo, Warner Baxter, or any other famous star flashes on the screen in a theatre, it is because approximately 200 persons—persons the audience never saw or even dreamed of—made it possible.

This is the odd fact based on a survey of production methods made by engineers at the various Hollywood studios. The figures show that it takes the work of approximately 200 individuals to show an actor on a screen in a theatre. They include cameramen, sound technicians, laboratory workers, assistant director and production managers, grips, electricians, property men, carpenters, assistants, cutters, set designers and dressers, makeup men—and many other callings.

The public knows that a motion picture is directed from a script or play, but doesn't know that no less than seven scripts really are used. The actors only see one—the one from which they learn their action. Even the director doesn't see some of the scripts.

First the "Treatment"

Before the play script was made, there was a "treatment" or elaborate detailed synopsis from which it was developed. This was much in the form of a fiction story. The treatments of "The Virginian," "The Secret Six," "The Front Page," and others literally could have been printed as fiction. From the treatment, the continuity as actor and director use it is developed. Then, from this continuity other scripts are made—the electrician's plot, which guides his designing of sets, the wardrobe plot and the camera plot, listing all the camera angles.

From the main script, too, is made the production schedule. Assistant director and production manager "break down" each scene, analyzing it into terms of "time to shoot," the set used, and the people, props

PRODUCTION FORECASTS

Production forecasts for 1931-32 indicate that there will be an unusual amount of comedy. It will be manifest not only in short subjects to a greater extent than in other years, but will be the theme of a much larger number of feature length pictures than before. It will pervade even the heaviest dramas. Producers state that the reason for the flood of comedy is to satisfy a desire on the part of the public for amusement during a period of general economic stress.

A compilation of statistics to determine the advantages of the foreign market for talking pictures is already underway in major studios, and the struggle to retain the foreign markets established by American-produced silent pictures will be one of the outstanding developments during the year. Next to pictures for the English speaking countries, our greatest market lies in countries where Spanish is the native tongue. Next in rank are German speaking countries, and after these, countries where French is spoken.

Producers indicate that they will produce almost as many foreign versions as English. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, with a schedule of 52 foreign versions, leads the list and at the opening of 1931 had more than sixty foreign players under contract. English speaking players with a command of foreign languages also are being pressed into service. First National has just concluded an extensive production schedule for foreign pictures. Carl Laemmle, Universal producer, is in the fight for foreign markets and is doing French, German and Spanish versions of his important features.

Fox, Columbia, Paramount and other major companies are following in line. RKO Pathe is the only major company which has not devoted time to foreign versions other than to synchronize music to major productions.

Radio Pictures is starting production of foreign versions slowly. Paramount, with studios at Joinville, near Paris, is in the midst of experimental work. This employment of foreign talent is adding to the Hollywood payroll, is stimulating business and is making possible the employment of thousands of workmen in construction. Rentals from foreign-version sound films also are swelling Hollywood producers' assets.

Indications are that there will be less music in pictures during 1931, the wave of musical comedies and theme songs having passed. Stage technique slowly is being changed and there will be a general tendency to eliminate dialogue as much as possible, to get out into the open and away from the artificiality of sound stages, and to restore the art of pantomime to more prominence than it has had on the sound screen. With the perfection of sound recording, the limits at first imposed are being eliminated, and producers are taking their casts into the open air again.

Production policies of major companies with regard to the type of picture to be dominant in 1931-32 would seem to be divided basically into two fundamental classifications, first, those concentrating on stars rather than stories, and secondly, those who are playing up the stories themselves rather than the featured names of certain players in the star category.

Warner Bros. and First National are, in cooperation, concentrating on the star value of 66 featured names. The public wants stars and youth, says Lee Marcus, president of R K O Pathe.

Fox, on the other hand, will concentrate on stories and pictures in a diversified program. Universal will follow that trend also, making a particular effort as well to feature popular novels and plays in its schedule.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer promises fewer gangster, war and costume stories this year, with the emphasis placed on melodramas, adventure pictures and on themes which will have a more or less definite tieup with current events, politically and socially.

Paramount will make a further effort to interest the children, which policy is being generally taken up, and will emphasize mystery pictures rather than gangster films. An effort here, too, will be made to obtain the most popular novels and plays currently before the public. Slapstick will be emphasized in the comedy output.

A survey reveals that film exchanges will handle approximately 30,000 miles of film a day. During the year, almost 280,000,000 feet of film will be shipped abroad. Six billion linear feet of film will be consumed in the manufacture of talking pictures.

The industry will produce this year product valued at approximately $200,000,000 and will employ 75,000 persons in production, 17,500 of whom will actually be on studio payrolls. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer alone will employ more than 3,000. Paramount about 1,800 and Fox approximately 2,500. The annual Hollywood payroll will approximate $1,600,000 a week, or $85,000,000 a year. Twenty-six studios will be in operation.

Columbia will release in 1931-32, 36 features and 117 short subjects.

Fox plans 48 features.

M-G-M expects to turn out 48 features and 93 shorts, a decided increase over last year in the latter category.

Paramount will make 70 feature length films, and 132 short subjects.

Radio raises its total to 36 for the year in features, and 56 in the short classification.

RKO Pathe will produce 27 features and 139 short subjects, including the Van Beuren series which it will release, as in the past.

United Artists plans 15 feature pictures, each, of course, the vehicle of a particular star.

Universal plans 40 features, including 14 "action" films, and 134 short subjects, on which some $18,000,000 will be expended. Warner and First National will produce 35 features each, while Vitaphone, the Warner short subject unit, which produces in New York, will release 150 subjects, for the most part in series.

Indications are that Tiffany will offer 25 feature films, and handle approximately 16 features from independent producers. The final figures for Tiffany, Educational and Sono Art-World Wide, however, were still undecided at the time of going to press, because of the triple merger under the leadership of Earle W. Hammons, president of Educational.

Darmour plans the expenditure of $500,000 on short subjects, to be released through Radio.

The following tables show the actual production figures, for 1931-32, as compared to 1930-31, for both features and short subjects.

INVESTMENTS

spent improving the Warner-First National properties at Burbank, Cal.

First National came into being March 28, 1926. It comprises at present 78 acres within the grounds proper and a fenced-in ranch of 1,100 acres. There are 54 buildings on the lot, with an aggregate floor space of 515,100 square feet.

These buildings include twelve sound stages, three administration buildings, dressing rooms, wardrobe, property and property store buildings, experimental science building, operating department building and many others.

Improvements on the property include four miles of paved street, twenty-one miles of lead-covered cable and eighteen miles of standard conduit for lighting. The cost of the studio building alone is estimated at higher than $3,000,000. Equipment is listed at $10,000,000.

SOUND LOCATION COSTS

"Making pictures on 'location' was rated as a welcome 'vacation,' a break in studio routine, eighteen years ago. Today, going outside a film plant means a definite increasing of the burden of hard labor. And it is all due to the insatiable public demand for 'better pictures.'"

The speaker was Cecil B. DeMille, the pioneer producer-director.

"I can make my comparison definite," stated De Mille, "by contrasting conditions in 1913, when I made 'The Squawman' initially as a silent picture; in 1918 when I made it again, still in silent form, and today, 1931, when it has been done as a talker.

"In 1913 we made all of the picture, except a few necessary interiors, on location; at a big mansion in Pasadena, in the garden of that mansion, and on an open section of rolling hills at Chatsworth, about forty miles from Hollywood.

"We carried our 25 people, cast, carpenters, cameramen, and so on, in three passenger cars. The meager amount of equipment went on a single one-ton truck.

Triple Investment in 1918

"In 1918 we had increased our staff and players to 50 people, and nearly tripled the amount of equipment. It now took several trucks to haul it. We needed the added people to carry reflectors, making sunlight shots more beautiful; and to bring an electric generator and electric lights to 'boost' photographic light values on cloudy days, and prevent delays which always cost money.

"For 'The Squawman,' talker style, 1931, I needed a staff of 72, and it took a special train of eleven cars to transport all our dunnage to our location in Arizona.

"In the first place, of course, it cost much more to take the 'troupe' to another state than it did to film the original scenes in the first 'Squawman.' But it frequently rains in California in the winter time. In 1913 a day's delay from rain meant little loss; today it is a terrific item. Therefore we chose a spot where it rains sometimes in the summer, but very, very seldom in the winter!

Sound Is the Big Factor

"Our increase in personnel was largely due to the coming of sound. It takes a number of trained men and laborers to handle the bulky sound equipment. In fact the huge portable recording trucks, weighing nine tons, which we have to have to record dialogue on location, are by far the biggest single thing.

"And then it is necessary to hold the attention of the public on a scene by heightening the dramatic action by new and clever methods of photographing. In 'The Squawman,' for example, we have a scene where Warner Baxter greets Roland Young at an automobile, and walks with him across a yard, through a door, and into the living room of a house where he sits down. In 1913 we would have had to break the continuity of this march several times. In 1931 we do it with a specially constructed 'camera crane' twenty-five feet long which can stick its long neck about with remarkable facility. But this crane, called 'Gertrude' because of its fancied resemblance to Gertrude the dinosaur, of the newspaper cartoons, weighs several tons and cost time, money and effort to transport!

"Yes, the steady demand of the public for 'better pictures' has taken all the picnic qualities out of going on 'location.'"

From this schedule actors are called, props and sets ordered, lighting checked and camera angles arranged. The production schedule is written on a series of celluloid strips which may be changed about in a frame, so that scenes in the same sets are placed together and calculated together.

Example of a Scene

Here is an example of a scene as described in the production schedule.

"Scene 94. In Jail. Medium closeup. Beery asks Jean Harlow to ensnare John Mack Brown. Cameras—one. No trucking. People—Beery and Harlow. Time of shooting, fifty feet. Props—cigar and lighter."

After the picture is filmed and cut, there is a "cutting continuity." The film is run off in the projection room, and a stenographer notes every detail and every action, making a running description of every foot of film. Often there are little changes from the script during the shooting. These are all noted in this "cutting continuity."

On the set, too, every time a scene is filmed a stenographer takes all dialogue verbatim. Often actors substitute words. Wallace Beery and some others "ad lib" lines of their own in a scene.

Enormous Clerical Work

The clerical work involved in "shooting" a picture is enormous—considering the work on the set by the script clerk, the cutting continuity, and the various props and scripts—to say nothing of preliminary treatments or outlines.

One man the audience doesn't see, who means much to the picture, is the "mixer" or sound technician sitting behind glass windows and manipulating delicate controls to modulate the voices. And there is the microphone boom man, who keeps the microphone at just the right distance from the actor. There is the electrician on the light bridge, who directs his spotlight to get a highlight on Lily Damita's hair, perhaps, or some shimmering costume.

and other details, so that no material needed in the scene may be overlooked.

A division of the motion picture dollar, as given herewith, has been compiled by film executives with a view to giving exhibitors and the public an idea of how the production budgets out of the money received at the box offices throughout the world are spent.

As it is estimated that the world attendance at motion picture theatres each week is 250,000,000, the item assumes even greater importance. In the United States alone, 115,000,000 is the estimated attendance at motion picture theatres each week.

Gross admissions in the United States over a period of a year are estimated at $1,560,000,000.

The division of the motion picture dollar follows:

Players' salaries	25
Director, camera men and assistants	10
Scenarios and stories	10
Sets (manufactured)	19
Studio overhead (including management, assembling, cutting, and titling of film)	20
Costumes and gowns	03
Locations (rent of grounds and properties and transportation)	08
Raw film	05
TOTAL	100

An opinion in no way official is that the chief changes talking pictures might make in this table would be an increase of perhaps 5 per cent in studio overhead, necessitated by use of talking equipment, and the balancing decrease in cost of locations and in cost of manufactured sets.

This opinion, however, does not take into consideration the number of millions of dollars placed in equipment, nor does it include experiment and research which is now underway.

That there has been a definite slowing down of production due to the use of sound, thus increasing generally the overhead, also is not revealed. The junking of old talent, the creation of new, the exploitation and the development of this talent, cannot be computed in definite figures.

STUDIO SLANGUAGE

"A" BATTERY. Battery supplying current to heat the filament of a vacuum tube.

ABERRATION. In a lens, generally refers to CHROMATIC ABERRATION. May also refer to spherical aberration, a blurring of the focus, due to the spherical shape of the lens faces.

ABSORPTION, ATMOSPHERIC. See ATMOSPHERIC ABSORPTION.

ABSORPTION COEFFICIENT. See COEFFICIENT.

A C, GIVE 'EM! See GIVE 'EM A C!

ACETATE FILM. Film whose base is composed principally of cellulose acetate.

ACHROMATIC LENS. Compound lens so devised ("corrected") as to have no chromatic aberration for two or more wave-lengths (colors), and very little aberration for all other visible wave-lengths.

ACOUSTICS. (1) Science of sound. (2) Acoustics of an enclosure: refers to hearing conditions within the enclosure, due to reflections and absorptions of sound.

A-C PICK-UP. Undesirable sound in the recording system—specifically, hum due to induction from neighboring a-c circuits.

ACTING RAYS. Rays having the property of effecting chemical changes, particularly on photographic emulsions. Generally only the rays to which ordinary emulsions are strongly sensitive are spoken of as actinic; these include green, blue, violet and ultra-violet. All visible and invisible rays are more or less actinic, however.

ADDITIVE PROCESS. Any color process in which various hues are obtained by the addition of two or more of the spectral regions comprising white light. In cinematography, such a process involves both (1) the storing of color values in the film (on successive frames, or separate portions of the same frame, or on different films) by the use of two or more color filters in photography, and (2) the reproduction of colors by the use of color filters again in projection. The film itself is generally not colored at any time; each frame or portion simply contains a black and white record of a certain limited color group. Compare SUBTRACTIVE PROCESS.

AEOLIGHT. (Aeolight.) Type of glow Discharge Tube which varies the intensity of its emitted light in accordance with small variations in the electric current flowing through it. (First syllable pronounced to rhyme with "day.")

AERIAL IMAGE. See IMAGE, AERIAL.

A. F. Abbreviation for AUDIO FREQUENCY.

AIR CONDENSER. See CONDENSER, AIR.

ALL BOTTOM. Sound in which low frequencies predominate.

ALL TOP. Sound in which high frequencies predominate.

AMPERE-HOUR. Quantity of electricity equal to that carried by a one-ampere current in one hour. Equals 3,600 coulombs.

AMPLIFICATION, POWER. See POWER AMPLIFICATION.

AMPLIFIER. A device for increasing the amplitude of electric current, voltage, and/or power of a large amount of power supplied power, through the control by the input by a local source to the output circuit. Specifically, (1) a vacuum tube used for this purpose; (2) the whole circuit of which such a tube is the essential element.

AMPLIFIER, AUDIO-FREQUENCY. See AUDIO-FREQUENCY AMPLIFIER.

AMPLIFIER, BRIDGING. See BRIDGING AMPLIFIER.

AMPLIFIER, CONDENSER TRANSMITTER. See CONDENSER TRANSMITTER AMPLIFIER.

AMPLIFIER, GAIN. See GAIN AMPLIFIER.

AMPLIFIER, POWER. See POWER AMPLIFIER.

AMPLIFIER, PUSH-PULL. See PUSH-PULL AMPLIFIER.

AMPLIFIER RECORDING. See RECORDING AMPLIFIER.

AMPLITUDE. The maximum height, or maximum depth, of a wave, measured from its base line or middle position. One-half the distance through which each part of the medium carrying the wave will vibrate from the time a crest passes to the time the next trough passes. The energy contained in a wave varies as the square of the amplitude of the wave.

ANCHOR BOLTS are used to fasten machines to their foundations.

ANGLE OF INCIDENCE. Angle between a ray and the normal (perpendicular) to a surface it strikes.

ANGLE OF REFLECTION. Angle between a reflected ray and the normal (perpendicular) to the reflecting surfaces.

ANGLE OF VIEW See VIEW, ANGLE OF.

ANGLE SHOT. A photographic view taken obliquely. See CAMERA ANGLE.

ANODE. Positive terminal of an electric device (cell or tube), at which the current (in the conventional direction) enters the device.

APERTURE. Opening in a partition; particularly, (1) the oblong opening at which each individual frame of a motion picture film is situated during exposure, printing, or projecting, as the case may be. (2) See APERTURE, LIMITING.

APERTURE, EFFECTIVE. Diameter of the imaginary aperture equal to the real diaphragm aperture multiplied by a factor to correct for the reduction in apparent size produced by the front lens. Equals the apparent diameter of the lens viewed from the position of the object against a diffusely illuminated background such as the sky.

APERTURE, LIMITING (sometimes simply "aperture"; but see APERTURE). Whatever opening in an optical system limits the maximum size of the image.

APERTURE, RELATIVE. Equals the effective aperture divided by the focal length of the lens. Thus a relative aperture of f:8 means that the focal length is eight times the effective aperture. A measure of the speed of the lens.

APERTURE PLATE. Plate of metal, containing the aperture in a projector, printer, or camera.

APOCHROMATIC LENS. Achromatic lens corrected for three colors.

APPLE (Colloq.). Audio-frequency vacuum tube.

AQUARIUM (Colloq.). Booth in which mixing is done.

ARC. Column of very hot, light-emitting gas, carrying an electric current sustaining this condition.

ARC, MIRROR or REFLECTOR. Projection arc with a concave mirror placed back of it to reflect and concentrate the light.

ARE WE PHASED? See PHASED.

ARMATURE. Device of iron or steel, around or along which are usually wound a number of coils the entire device being placed within a magnetic field so as to concentrate the magnetic flux through itself. Its purpose is to produce currents within itself (as in a generator) or to rotate or vibrate in a desired manner (as in a motor, vibrator, or galvanometer).

ARTICULATION. A measure of the intelligibility of speech.

ASH CAN (Colloq.). A large multiple arc lamp swung from overhead.

ASTIGMATISM. A lens defect which causes blurring (lengthening, broadening, or both) of images.

ATMOSPHERIC ABSORPTION. Absorption of energy (sound or light) by air.

ATTENUATION. Weakening of intensity.

AUDIO FREQUENCY. Frequency of vibration within the limits of good hearing, 20 to about 10,000 cycles per second. Abbreviated a.f.

AUDIO-FREQUENCY AMPLIFIER. Magnifies currents whose frequency of alteration lies in the audio-frequency range.

AUDION. Three-electrode vacuum tube.

AUTOMATIC SHUTTER. See SHUTTER, AUTOMATIC.

AUTOTRANSFORMER. Type of transformer in which primary and secondary coils are partly identical, instead of separate as in the usual type.

AXIS, LENS or OPTICAL. See OPTICAL AXIS.

AXIS OF PROJECTION. See PROJECTION, AXIS OF.

"B" BATTERY. Battery (of comparatively high voltage) supplying electromotive force for the plate circuit of a vacuum tube.

B. A. Abbreviation for BRIDGING AMPLIFIER.

BABY. A small spotlight arc or incandescent; but generally a "Klieg Lilliput," a small light more portable than regular Kliegs.

BABY TRIPOD. A small, easily portable camera tripod.

BACK FOCAL LENGTH. The distance from the back of the lens to the film in the gate while the image is in focus on the screen.

BACK-FOCUS. Distance from the principal focus of a lens (behind the lens) to its nearest face.

BACKLASH. "Play" or looseness of a screw or bolt in its fitting.

BAFFLE. A portable wall or block for the absorption or reinforcement of sound.

BAFF. Contraction of Baffle.

BAFFLE BLANKETS. Felt, muslin-covered sheets, hung about a set to absorb sound.

BAFFLE BOARD. Resonating board in a DYNAMIC CONE.

BAG, CHANGING. See CHANGING BAG.

BALSAM, CANADA. Transparent gum used in cementing lenses.

BAND-PASS FILTER. See FILTER, BAND PASS.

BAR. A pressure of one dyne per square centimeter is called a bar.

BARREL, LENS. See LENS BARREL.

BARREL, DISTORTION. Lens defect which causes the image of parallel lines to bulge outward.

BARRIER. The thin blank track between sound track and pictures.

BASE. (1) Celluloid component of film. This is the usual meaning of the word in cinematography. (2) In chemistry, a hydroxide.

BATH. Any chemical solution used in treating photographic materials.

BATTERY, "A," "B," and "C." See respective letters.

BEATS. Vibrations produced by interference between two or more wave-lengths.

BEL. Equals ten DECIBELS.

BINAURAL. Pertaining to both ears.

BLANKET, MIKE. See MICROPHONE BLANKET.

BLEEDING. Distortion of image, due to spreading of colors, in tinting or toning film.

BLIMP. Soundproofed covering built around the camera. Interchangeable term for BUNGALOW.

BLOOP. noun. Dull thud emitted in sound reproduction, due to a poorly made BLOPING PATCH.

BLOOP, verb. To prepare a BLOPING PATCH.

BLOPING PATCH. Triangular or oval black section introduced over a splice in the positive sound track, to prevent the noise which the splice would otherwise cause during reproduction. The patch effects a relatively gradual diminution in the transmitted light, followed by gradual restoration to the original value. The sound frequency due to a properly blooped patch is too low to be heard but see Bloop.

BLOPS, O. K. ON THE. See O. K. ON THE BLOPS.

BLUE GLASS. A monocle-shaped glass of special blue tint used by cinematographers to determine color values of a set, when photographing on ORTHOCHROMATIC emulsions, or to judge the lighting conditions on the set when photographing with PANCHROMATIC emulsions. (In the latter case the glass is not necessarily blue; any glass of low transmission, with which the cinematographer has had experience, will do.)

BLUE LIGHT. In certain studios, signal that monitor man is ready and standing by for a take.

BOOM, MICROPHONE. See MICROPHONE BOOM.

BOOMY. Same as ALL BOTTOM.

BOOTH, CAMERA. See CAMERA BOOTH.

BOTTOM. Low-frequency sounds.

BOUNCE. Same as BRILLIANCE, particularly with regard to the factor of reverberation.

BREAKWAY. A prop or set that has been especially prepared to fall apart or fracture easily.

BREAKER, CIRCUIT. See CIRCUIT BREAKER.

BREEZING. Said to occur when projected picture is blurred as a result of distortion of focus in camera, printer, or projector—due to uneven shrinkage of negative or positive, or to perforations of uneven pitch.

BRIDGING AMPLIFIER. Any amplifier of relatively high input impedance, so that a number of such units may be connected in multiple across a relatively low impedance circuit without materially affecting its electrical condition and without reaction on one another. Abbreviated B.A.

BRIGHT. Refers to BRILLIANCE.

BRILLIANCE. A sound record possesses brilliance if it contains plenty of high frequencies and is therefore rich in overtones, and if it is recorded in adequately reverberant surroundings.

BROAD, BROADSIDE. Type of incandescent flood lamp.

BROMIDING. As a DEVELOPER is used over and over, bromide is deposited in it by the emulsion developed. The presence of this bromide increases the INERTIA of the developed film.

BUCKLING. Jamming of film in camera, printer, or projector, usually due to intense heat, or to improper threading up.

BUG. An insect that flies across the set while the camera is operating, usually requiring that the scene be done over again.

BULL SWITCH. Electrical switch for controlling lights.

BUMPS. Low-frequency sounds, heard in reproduction, due to irregularities in the sound track.

BUNGALOW. Same as BLIMP.

BURNED UP. Over-exposed.

BUTTERFLY. Silk cloth on frame used to soften light when making exteriors. See DIFFUSER.

BUZZARD. Bad photographic take.

B. X. Same as CONDUIT.

BY-PASS CONDENSER. Condenser used to separate alternating and direct components of current.

C

"C" BATTERY. Small battery ordinarily used for supplying negative potential in the grid circuit of a three-element vacuum tube.

CABLE. Heavy, well-insulated bundle of wires for conducting electricity.

CAM. In general, a non-circular rotating piece in a mechanism. In the intermittent movement of the film in a motion picture camera, printer, or projector.

CAMERA, ANGLE. Angle of view taken by the motion picture camera. Usually refers to the horizontal angle but occasionally refers to vertical angle.

CAMERA BOOTH. Soundproof booth, containing cinematographer and his equipment. The camera is operated in this to prevent noise of camera mechanism from reaching microphone. Camera booths are not now in general use, the camera being placed in a BLIMP.

CAMERA MOUNT. Any kind of camera support other than a tripod.

CAN. (1) Metal container for film. (2) Earphone used for monitoring (cf. MONITORING, (1).)

CANADA BALSAM. Transparent gum used in cementing lenses.

CANARIES. Unidentified high-frequency noises in the recording system.

CANDLE. Abbreviated form of CANDLE-POWER, (2).

CANDLE-POWER. (1) Luminous intensity of a light source, measured in luminous flux emitted per unit solid angle.

(2) Unit of candle-power, (1), equal to the luminous intensity of a certain type of standard candle burning under certain standard conditions.

CAPACITANCE. The measure of the quantity of electricity a condenser can hold. It equals the quantity stored divided by the voltage (pressure) storing it.

CAPACITY. Same as CAPACITANCE.

CAPACITY, CARRYING. Current a conductor can carry without becoming overheated.

CAT WALK. Narrow overhead bridge.

CATHODE. Negative terminal of an electric device (cell or tube), from which the current (in the conventional direction) leaves the device.

CENTER LENS. In a three-lens condenser, the middle one of the three lenses.

CENTIMETER. Unit of length in the metric system. Equal to 0.3937 inch. Abbreviated cm.

CHANGE-OVER. In projection, the act of changing from one projector to another (preferably without interrupting the continuity of projection); or, the points in the picture at which such a change is made.

CHANGING BAG. Light-tight bag, used in changing undeveloped films.

CHANNEL. A complete set of recording equipment from microphone to film or disc recording units, inclusive.

CHARACTERISTIC, CHARACTERISTIC CURVE. Graph showing the essential features of the performance of a photoelectric cell, vacuum tube, photographic emulsion, or other piece of apparatus. For a film, the curve shows how transmission, or density, varies with exposure (see EXPOSURE.)

CHOKE, CHOKE COIL. Coil of wire wound on an iron core and thus possessing high inductance.

CHROMATIC. Relating to color.

CHROMATIC ABERRATION. The production of color fringes in the image formed when white light is passed through a lens, due to the fact that the lens bends the light rays of different colors by slightly different amounts.

CHUTE, DOWN THE! Order to send sound into the amplifier room.

CINCHING UP. Tightening a roll of film by holding the center and pulling on the outer cord. This is liable to injure the film.

CINOPHOT. Pocket photometer for determining the proper exposure for film.

CIRCLE IN. Same as IRIS IN.

CIRCLE OF CONFUSION. Round image of a point of light not in focus. The circle of least confusion of a lens is the smallest circle of confusion obtainable with the lens by the best possible adjustment of focus.

CIRCLE OUT. Same as IRIS OUT.

CIRCUIT-BREAKER. Switch which opens a circuit automatically when the circuit becomes overloaded (or else, for some types of breaker, underloaded).

CLAW. Type of mechanism for intermittent movement. Cf. IN-AND-OUT MOVEMENT.

CLEAN recording channel is one which has practical no unwanted noises in its output.

CLICK YOUR HORN! See HORN, CLICK YOUR. CLICKS, O. K. ON THE! See O. K. ON THE CLICKS!

CLIP. Form of snap fastener for making electrical connections.

CLOSE-UP. Picture taken showing characters or objects at a short distance. Lenses for close-ups have generally a focal length greater than three inches.

cm. Abbreviation for CENTIMETER.

COCHLEA. Part of the inner ear in which the auditory nerves terminate.

COEFFICIENT OF SOUND ABSORPTION. When sound energy strikes any substance, it is partly reflected, partly transmitted, and partly absorbed (converted into heat). The percentage of energy absorbed by a given object is the object's absorption coefficient.

COLLECTING LENS. In a three-lens condenser, the lens nearest the light source.

COMMUTATOR. That part of a dynamo that changes direction of currents, so that the current flowing in the outside circuit will remain d. c.

COMMUTATOR RIPPLE. Small alternations in the emf. produced by a d-c. generator, due to the operation of the commutator. This ripple is the chief cause of arc hum.

COMPENSATOR. (1) Device for regulating speed for a film-carrying drum in certain types of sound-recording and reproducing devices. (2) Device regulating voltage supplied to a motor.

COMPO BOARD. Contraction of composition board, a common building material in studios.

COMPOUND LENS. See LENS, COMPOUND.

CONCAVE. Curved inward.

CONDENSER. (1) A device for the temporary storage of electric energy, consisting of two conductors (or else one conductor and ground) separated by an insulator, or of a number of such elements combined to act as a unit.

(2) A lens or set of lenses used to focus light upon the aperture of a motion picture projector or into an intense spot of light for use in a motion picture studio.

CONDENSER, AIR. Condenser in which the dielectric (insulator) is air.

CONDENSER, BY-PASS. See BY-PASS CONDENSER.

CONDENSER, DISC. Kind of CONDENSER, VARIABLE.

CONDENSER, PAPER. Condenser in which the dielectric (insulator) is paraffin paper.

CONDENSER, STOPPING. Condenser used to block flow of d-c. in a circuit.

CONDENSER, VARIABLE. Condenser whose capacitance can be varied at will between certain values.

CONDENSER LOUDSPEAKER. Loudspeaker in which the mechanical forces producing the sound are obtained by varying the voltage between two electrodes of a condenser forming a part of an electrical circuit.

CONDENSER MICROPHONE. Microphone which transfers sound waves into variations of electric current by acting as a variable condenser.

CONDENSER TRANSMITTER AMPLIFIER. A voltage amplifier designed to operate on tiny variations of electric current, and therefore placed directly behind the condenser microphone in a recording system. Abbreviated C.T.A.

CONDENSING LENS. Same as CONDENSER, (2).

CONDUIT. Metal tubing containing two conducting wires insulated from one another and from the tubing.

CONE, DYNAMIC. See DYNAMIC CONE.

CONTINUOUS PROJECTOR. (1) Projector in which the film travels past the aperture with constant velocity, instead of continually starting and stopping as in the intermittent projectors in general use.

(2) Also, a projector which automatically shows the same film over and over without rewinding.

CONTINUOUS WAVES are those having a constant amplitude.

CONVERGING LENS. In a three-lens condenser, the lens nearest the objective.

CONVERTER. Machine which employs mechanical rotation in changing electric energy from one form to another, as (1) from d-c. to a-c., or (2) from d-c. to d-c. of different voltage, or (3) from a-c. to d-c., or (4) from a-c. to a-c. of different number of phases, or (5) from a-c. to a-c. of different frequency.

CONVEX. Curved outward.

COOKED. Over-developed.

COOLING PLATE. Shield placed between light source and mechanism, to prevent mechanism from becoming overheated.

COOPER HEWITT (Cooper Hewitt). Common type of mercury vapor arc.

COOPS. Slang for COOPER HEWITT arcs.

COULOMB. Unit of quantity of electricity; equals the quantity of electricity flowing in one second past any point in a circuit carrying one ampere of d-c.

COUPLING. When two electric circuits are so placed or interconnected that energy may be transferred from one to the other, they are said to be coupled. The circuits need not be physically connected; their magnetic fluxes may link, as in a transformer.

c. p. Abbreviation for CANDLE-POWER.

CRATER. Depression that forms in the positive electrode of a carbon arc.

CRESCENDO. Climax of sound.

CROSS LINES. Fine lines engraved on glass, used in testing for accurate focussing of lenses.

C. T. A. Abbreviation for CONDENSER TRANSMITTER AMPLIFIER.

CUT OVER (or OVERCUT). Said to occur when the cutter on a disc recording machine jumps over from one groove to another, due to the application of excessive energy.

CUTTER. In disc sound recording, the instrument which cuts the grooves on the wax disc.

CUTTING ROOM. Room where the film is assembled or cut.

CYCLE. One complete set of the changes of a wave (or other periodic phenomenon), as from crest to trough and back to crest again. May refer to waves of sound, or alternating current, or any other waves or vibrations. Always relative to a second of time; thus "cycles" means 60 cycles per second.

D

DAILIES. Film which, photographed one day, is developed and printed overnight and screened the next day for the benefit of the director and assistants. Synonym, RISHIES.

DAILY. Cf. DAILIES.

DAMPING. (1) Gradual steady decrease of wave amplitude, and consequent steady decrease of volume of sound or of electric waves.

(2) Removal of echoes or reverberation in a set by use of sound-absorbing materials.

DARK ROOM. Room in which film is developed.

db. Abbreviation for DECIBEL.

DEAD. (1) Of electric wires, disconnected from circuit.

(2) Of sets, enclosed by materials which absorb almost all sound from within the set.

(3) Of other apparatus, not functioning.

DECIBEL. Unit of gain and loss of energy, intensity, loudness. Equal to ten times the logarithm (to the base 10) of the ratio I/I_0 where I is final intensity and I_0 is initial intensity in a transmitting system, or (when the decibel is used as an absolute unit) I_0 is a standard intensity. Other names and abbreviations are db, SU, sensation unit, TU, transmission unit. Note: the logarithm of 2 is 0.3 very nearly, therefore intensity is doubled for each gain of 3 db.

DENSITOMETER. Apparatus for measuring densities, as of photographic films.

DENSITY. (1) Logarithm (to the base 10) of capacity; capacity is the reciprocal of transmission (see TRANSMISSION). Thus a film transmitting 100% of the light has density 0; transmitting 10%, density 1; transmitting 1%, density 2; etc. To add a density of 0.3 is to cut transmission in half.

(2) Mass of a substance divided by its volume.

DENSITY, DIFFUSE. See DIFFUSE DENSITY.

DENSITY, ENERGY. See ENERGY DENSITY.

DENSITY, SPECULAR. See SPECULAR DENSITY.

DEPTH OF FIELD. The range of object distances within which objects are in satisfactory sharp focus in a photograph.

DEPTH OF FOCUS. (1) Same as DEPTH OF FIELD. (2) The range through which a photographic plate can be moved forward and backward with respect to the lens while maintaining satisfactorily sharp focus on an object at a given distance.

DEUCE. Piece of lighting equipment for housing 2-kilowatt incandescent lamp.

DEVELOPER. Chemical solution having the property of resolving latent photographic images on exposed film into metallic form.

DEVELOPMENT. Process of chemically treating an exposed photographic emulsion to make the latent image visible. For details, see FIRST EMULSION, then EXPOSURE; also see FIXING.

DIAPHRAGM. Thin plate, generally metal. In a camera, the iris-like device consisting of movable curved blades which may be adjusted to control the limiting aperture. (See APERTURE, LIMITING.) In a microphone, the front vibrating plate.

DIELECTRIC. The insulator in a condenser.

DIFFRACTION. Bending of waves around an obstacle.

DIFFUSE DENSITY. The value of DENSITY obtained when transmission is measured for diffuse light—e.g., light transmitted through the negative in a contact printer.

DIFFUSER. Device of silk or gauze placed over lights to diffuse the rays. For exteriors, a frame of similar material to diffuse sunlight.

DIMMER. Rheostat to regulate intensity of incandescent lamps.

DISC CONDENSER. Kind of CONDENSER, VARIABLE.

DISCHARGE TUBE. A closed tube (generally glass) from which most of the air and other gas has been pumped out, and into which a small amount of inert gas is introduced. This gas is capable of conducting an electric current when voltage is applied to the tube terminals, and, in doing so, will emit light more or less in proportion to the amount of current flowing.

DISSOLVE. The gradual change of one scene into another, made by lapping the fade-in of the one on the fade-out of the other. If accomplished by double exposure or double printing on the same strip of film it is known as a lap-dissolve.

DISTORTION, BARREL. See BARREL DISTORTION.

DISTORTION, PILLOW. See PILLOW DISTORTION.

DOG LEG. Kink in the starting spiral on a disc record, due to an imperfection in the spiral-cutting mechanism.

DOLLY. Any small rolling platform. Sometimes, specifically, one large enough to carry the camera, cameraman and director, and used to permit the camera to approach or recede from the scene being photographed.

DOUBLE EXPOSURE. Exposure of a negative film at two separate times before development. Two images will then appear combined upon the film when developed.

DOUBLE MAGAZINE. A magazine for a camera through which two negatives are to run simultaneously. In such a camera each magazine must have two compartments.

DOUBLE PRINTING. Exposure of a positive under two negatives prior to its development.

DOUSER. (1) Manually or (generally) electrically operated door, to cut off the light from the projection lamp from reaching the film.

(2) Any door to prevent light from leaving the projection booth or other lamp-house.

DOWN THE CHUTE! Send sound into amplifier room!

DROP THE HORN. To decrease the volume of sound from the loudspeaker.

DROP THE MIKE. To lower the position of the microphone.

DRUM. Huge wooden wheel on which film is spun in the drying process after development.

DRUM, RECORDING. See RECORDING DRUM.

DRUM DEVELOPMENT, or DRUM SYSTEM. In this method of developing, films are wound spirally on cylinders which are revolved with the lower surface dipping in troughs of developer.

DRUM MEMBRANE. Membrane closing the inner end of the trumpet formed by the outer ear.

DRUNKEN SCREW. See SCREW, DRUNKEN.

DUBBING. Re-recording of all or part of a sound record for the preparation of a new master record, for editorial purposes, for changing volume levels or frequency characteristic, or for changing the recording medium (as from film to disc, or disc to film). Dubbing may or may not involve SCORING, partial or complete.

DUPE. Negative made from a positive.

DURALUMIN. A very hard alloy of aluminum with small amounts of copper, iron, magnesium, silicon and manganese.

d v. DOUBLE VIBRATION. Same as CYCLE, for sound vibrations.

DYNAMIC CONE. Type of LOUDSPEAKER in which the modulated electric current passes through a coil placed in a magnetic field. The coil and an attached paper cone vibrate and thus generate sound in accordance with the modulations of the current.

DYNAMITE. An open connection box dangerous if stepped on, into which the studio lamps are plugged.

DYNAMO. Machine to convert mechanical into electrical energy.

DYNAMOTOR. Type of CONVERTER, (2).

DYNE. Unit of force in the metric system. Approximately 450,000 dynes equal one pound of force. 68,944 dynes per square centimeter equal one pound per square inch.

E

EAGLE. (1) An insect that flies across the set while the camera is operating, usually requiring that the scene must be done over again. (2) A perfect photographic take.

EAR MUFFS. Rubber cushions attached to the monitoring ear phones ("CANS") to shut out extraneous noises.

ECONOMIZER. Step-down transformer.

EFFICIENCY, PHOTOGRAPHIC. of a light source, is the ratio of that part of the light flux which the photographic emulsion will record, to the total light flux emitted.

ELECTRODE. Terminal of an electric device such as a cell or vacuum tube.

ELECTROLYTE. Liquid conductor of electricity, as in a battery.

ELECTRON. Unit of negative electricity, and smallest particle of matter, next to the proton. Radius, about 2×10^{-13} cm. (i.e., 0.000,000,000,000,2 cm.). Mass., $9 \cdot 10^{-28}$ gram. Negative charge, 1.6×10^{-19} coulomb.

ELECTRON TUBE. Generally, same as VACUUM TUBE, THERMIONIC. May also refer to PHOTO-ELECTRIC CELL.

ELECTROPLATING. Process of depositing a metal on another metal by making the latter the cathode of a suitable solution through which an electric current is sent. The solution must contain a salt of the metal to be deposited.

ELECTROSTATIC. Pertaining to electric charges at rest.

ELEPHANT EARS. Small Gobos.

EMULSION. The light-sensitive substance on a photographic film or plate, consisting of a gelatine containing a silver halide or nitrate. For its action, see EXPOSURE, and DEVELOPMENT, and FIXING.

ENERGENCY DENSITY. Quantity of energy contained in a given volume, divided by volume.

EQUIVALENT FOCUS or FOCAL LENGTH. See FOCAL LENGTH, EQUIVALENT.

ERG. Unit of work or energy in the metric system. Approximately 13,560,000 ergs equal one foot-pound of work.

EXCITER LAMP. Light source used in reproducing sound from film.

EXPONENTIAL HORN. See HORN, EXPONENTIAL.

EXPOSURE. The placing of a photograph emulsion under the action of light. Quantity of exposure varies very nearly as the product of time and light intensity. The quantity of exposure determines the amount by which the silver halide or nitrate in the emulsion will be chemically changed ("reduced") to silver when the emulsion is developed. See EMULSION and DEVELOPMENT.

EXPOSURE, DOUBLE. See DOUBLE EXPOSURE.

EXTENSION. Stage cable with lugs on both ends.

EXTINCTION COEFFICIENT. Same as DENSITY, (1).

EYE-PIECE. Lens to which the eye is applied in any optical instrument such as a telescope or microscope.

F

"F" SYSTEM. System of marking lens diaphragm stops in terms of the focal length. Thus an F:6.3 stop has a diameter equal to $1/6.3$ of the lens focal length.

FADER. Potentiometer used to control volume of sound in reproduction, also that used to control intensity of the printer light.

FARAD. Unit of capacitance. Capacitance of a condenser in which one coulomb will be stored by one volt. (The microfarad is the unit commonly employed in practice.)

FAST. Cf. SPEED.

FAST FEED. Mechanism used on a disc-recording machine to produce the starting spiral.

FEAR PROCESS. Method of recording and projecting wide pictures, by photographing on standard film through an optical system that turns the image through a right angle, so that the image of each frame lies along the length of the film instead of across the film. The frames can be longer than standard, thus permitting a width and height of picture greater than standard. In projection, another optical system is used to reverse the 90° rotation.

FEED REEL. Reel of film which has not yet passed the aperture.

FIELD, MAGNETIC. See MAGNETIC FIELD.

FIELD OF VIEW. See VIEW, ANGLE OF.

FIELD RHEOSTAT. See RHEOSTAT, FIELD.

FILAMENT. Heated wire from which electrons are emitted in a vacuum tube.

FILAMENT BATTERY. Same as "A" BATTERY.

FILAMENT RESISTANCE. Rheostat controlling current through the filament of a vacuum tube.

FILM (noun). A celluloid strip coated with a light-sensitive photographic emulsion.

FILM (verb). To reproduce a scene or series of scenes on film.

FILM GATE. Movable element which when in operating position, holds the film in proper position against the aperture plate.

FILTER. An apparatus or instrument to remove or weaken certain frequencies in a beam of sound, light, radio or alternating-current waves or mechanical vibrations. Particularly (1) colored glass or celluloid used in photography to filter out certain rays of light; or (2) a selective circuit network, designed to pass currents within a continuous band or bands of frequencies or direct current, and substantially reduces the amplitude of currents of undesired frequencies.

FILTER, BAND-PASS. A filter designed to pass currents of frequencies within a continuous band limited by an upper and a lower critical or cut-off frequency and substantially reduce the amplitude of currents of all frequencies outside of that band.

FILTER, HIGH-PASS. A filter designed to pass currents of all frequencies above a critical or cut-off frequency and substantially reduce the amplitude of currents of all frequencies below this critical frequency.

FILTER, LOW-PASS. A filter designed to pass currents of all frequencies below a critical or cut-off frequency and substantially reduce the amplitude of currents of all frequencies below this critical frequency.

FIRE-TRAP. See MAGAZINE VALVE.

FIRST PHASE. Initial interlocking of all recording machine and camera motors, so that they will be synchronized.

FIXING. After development of a photographic emulsion, it is fixed, i. e., immersed in a solution (generally HyPO) to remove the unexposed silver salt, thus making the emulsion immune to further effect from light. See EXPOSURE AND DEVELOPMENT.

FLAT. Same as TORMENTOR.

FLICKER occurs when the number of pictures shown on the screen per unit time is not sufficient to insure complete PERSISTENCE OF VISION.

FLICKER SHUTTER. See SHUTTER, FLICKER.

FLUTTER. A type of pulsation of intensity in reproduced sound. See Wow-Wows for explanation.

FLUX, LIGHT or LUMINOUS. See LUMINOUS FLUX.

FLUX, MAGNETIC. See MAGNETIC FLUX.

FOCAL LENGTH. Distance from the center of a lens to the focal point.

FOCAL LENGTH, BACK. See BACK FOCAL LENGTH.

FOCAL LENGTH, EQUIVALENT. Calculated focal length of a combination of lenses or of a thick lens. Equals the focal length of such a simple thin lens as would give an image (of a distant object) the same size as the combination or thick lens gives.

FOCAL PLANE. The plane perpendicular to the optical axis of the lens at the focus.

FOCAL POINT. Point at which a lens forms the sharpest image of a very distant object.

FOCUS (noun). The point at which a lens produces the smallest image of a point object at a given distance. Also used for FOCAL POINT or for FOCAL LENGTH.

FOCUS (verb). To adjust the position of a lens so as to secure the sharpest possible image of an object.

FOCUS, BACK. See BACK-FOCUS.

FOCUS, EQUIVALENT. See FOCAL LENGTH and FOCAL LENGTH EQUIVALENT.

FOCUS, DEPTH OF. See DEPTH OF FOCUS.

FOCUS, OUT OF. Of a camera lens; not properly focused, producing a distorted image.

FOCUS, PRINCIPAL. The focus for an object at an infinite or very great distance.

FOCUS, SOFT. Device to obtain an image not sharply defined, by (1) placing gauze on the camera lens, (2) use of a specially ground lens.

FOG. Darkening of photographic film due to its exposure to undesirable light, or due to poor emulsion or to improper development.

FOOTAGE. Film length measured in feet.

FOOT-CANDLE. Unit of illumination of surface. The average illumination of a surface, measured in foot-candles, equals the LUMINOUS FLUX (expressed in LUMENS) falling on the surface, divided by the area of the surface in square feet.

FRAME (noun). A single rectangle of the series on a motion picture film.

FRAME (verb). To bring a frame into register with the aperture during the period of rest in recording, printing, or projection.

FRAME LINE. Dividing line between two frames.

FRAME LINE NOISE. Noise in reproduction, due to the displacement of the film to the right in the projection machine, so that the beam of light for the sound track shines through part of the picture area as well, and cuts the frame lines. This noise is a type of MOTOR-BOATING.

FRAMING DEVICE. An attachment on the projector which allows the operator to FRAME the picture properly.

FREAK. Slang for FREQUENCY.

FREE PATH, MEAN. See MEAN FREE PATH.

FREQUENCY. Number of cycles (complete vibrations) per second in a wave or other regular recurring phenomena.

FREQUENCY, AUDIO. See AUDIO FREQUENCY.

FREQUENCY, NATURAL. See NATURAL FREQUENCY.

FREQUENCY, RADIO. See RADIO FREQUENCY.

FRILLING. Separation of the emulsion from the BASE at the edges.

FRINGE. Refers to overlapping of colors in color photography.

FROZEN. Of carbon electrodes, means fused together so that lifting mechanism cannot pull them apart and so strike the arc.

FRYER. A large electric lamp, usually used in connection with color photography.

FUNDAMENTAL. Lowest natural frequency of oscillation for a sounding body or for an electric circuit.

FUZZY. (1) Of sound track on visual inspection: lack of sharpness. (2) of reproduced sound: characterized by distortion, particularly of high frequencies. The distortion may have been introduced in recording, processing or reproduction.

G

GAFFER. Electrician in charge of a group of electrical workers.

GAIN. Gain of energy in an apparatus is ratio of output to input energy.

GAIN AMPLIFIER. Any amplifier which handles comparatively small amounts of energy, as in the initial stages of a sound recording system. Specifically, the first amplifier used in disc reproduction for amplifying the varying current from the magnetic pickup or the first amplifier after the photoelectric cell amplifier, for the purpose of further amplifying the varying currents, in sound-on-film reproduction.

GAIN CONTROL. Device for varying the gain of an amplifier.

GALVANOMETER. An instrument for measuring electric current strength (or for detecting a small current, and determining its direction), generally by the deflection of a needle due to the magnetic field caused by the current.

GALVANOMETER, STRING. Utilizes a conducting wire or ribbon vibrating in a strong magnetic field according to the variations of the conducted current.

GAMMA. Slope of the straight portion of the CHARACTERISTIC CURVE of a photographic emulsion; measure of the contrast of the emulsion.

GARGLE. A type of pulsation of intensity in reproduced sound. See Wow-Wows for explanation.

GATE, FILM. See FILM GATE.

GATE, SOUND. See SOUND GATE.

GENERATOR. See DYNAMO.

GENEVA MOVEMENT. Intermittent movement (produced by a cam-and-star wheel) used in most projection machines.

G. E.'S (Colloq.). Generally, same as INKIES.

GIVE 'EM A-C-I. To start synchronization of camera and recording motors.

GLASS WORK. Trick photography in which pictures on glass are used to replace parts of the setting.

GLOW LAMP. Lamp containing gas which, when the voltage across the lamp reaches a certain ("critical") value, conducts an electric current and in doing so emits light.

GOBO. Portable wall covered with sound-absorbing material. Not intended to be photographed.

GOESOVER. A shield for a camera lens to protect against top light.

GOVERNOR MOVEMENT. Mechanism which controls the automatic shutter. See SHUTTER, AUTOMATIC.

GRAINS. Refers to the tiny clusters of silver grains on a developed photographic film. See DEVELOPMENT.

GRAM. Metric unit of mass. Approximately 454 grams equals one avoirdupois pound.

GRANULARITY. Coarseness in the silver grains in a developed photographic image.

GRAPHITE (noun). Soft form of carbon. Used as a lubricant.

GRAPHITE (verb). To cover a surface uniformly with graphite (which is a conductor) so that the surface can be electroplated.

GREEN LIGHT. In certain studios, signal that stage is ready for a sound take.

GRID. In a vacuum tube, the frame of wire gauze between the filament and plate. Small changes in the electric potential of the grid circuit produce far greater changes in the electron flow from filament to plate.

GRID BATTERY. Same as "C" BATTERY.

GRID LEAK. Very high, non-inductive resistance, usually connected across a condenser in the grid circuit of a three-electrode vacuum tube, to stabilize the action of the condenser (in making the tube more efficient) by permitting excess charge to leak off.

GROUND GLASS. Glass ground or sandblasted on one side, so that it is no longer transparent, although still translucent (i. e., transmitting light diffusely); used for a focusing screen.

GROUND NOISE. Undesirable noise appearing in reproduced sound, due to film grain, amplifier noises, etc.

H

HALATION. Blurring about a brightly-lit part of the picture, due to the lateral spreading of light in the film, or to reflection, or to improper development.

HALIDE. May mean bromide chloride iodide, or (though not generally) fluoride.

H AND D CURVE (H and D Curve). The CHARACTERISTIC CURVE of a photographic emulsion. (Hurter and Driffel Curve.)

HARD. Of a vacuum tube, thoroughly evacuated.

HARD LIGHTS. (1) Arc lights. (2) Illumination from arcs, in general. Refers to the sharp shadows cast.

HARDENER. Solution used to harden photographic emulsion.

HARMONIC. Same as PARTIAL.

HARMONIC CAM MOVEMENT. Common type of intermittent movement for motion picture cameras.

HARVEY METER (Harvey Meter). Mechanical calculator designed to give the correct exposure when set for the various conditions which effect the quantity and quality of light.

HAT, HIGH. A very low camera stand.

HEAD, SOUND. See SOUND HEAD.

HEYDE METER (Heyde Meter). Light meter for determining desirable exposure.

HIGH HAT. A very low camera stand.

HIGH LIGHT. Object, scene, or picture having low color saturation, that is containing a large proportion of white.

HIGH-PASS FILTER. See FILTER, HIGH-PASS.

HOOD, LENS. See LENS HOOD.

HOOK-UP. Diagram of an electrical circuit; or, the construction of such a circuit.

HORN. Loudspeaker of either horn or cone type.

HORN, CLICK YOUR! Tickle the playback needle (before starting a playback); to produce clicks in the horn as a test of whether or not the circuit is complete.

HORN, DROP THE. See DROP THE HORN.

HORN, EXPONENTIAL. Type of loudspeaker horn in which the cross-section area increases exponentially with the axial distance from the diaphragm, so that cross-section areas, taken at equal intervals along the axis, have a constant ratio each to the next.

HOT. Electrically charged, particularly when dangerous.

HURTER AND DRIFFIELD CURVE (Hurter and Driffel Curve). Characteristic curve of a photographic emulsion. See CHARACTERISTIC CURVE.

HYPHER. Prefix meaning excessively.

HYPO. Sodium thiosulphate, used for fixing photographic emulsion. See FIXING.

I

IMAGE. The effect produced by a definite aggregation of light rays coming directly or indirectly from an object or group of objects, and determined in form and color by two factors: the original object, and the mediums which have transmitted the light rays. A mirror forms an image of any suitably placed object; so does a lens, so does any OPTICAL SYSTEM. Images may be larger or smaller than the object; may be inverted or not; and may or may not have various distortions. The human eye can see by virtue of the fact that the eye is an optical system which forms a REAL IMAGE on the retina. (This image is actually inverted, but is re-inverted by the brain in the process of interpretation.) Compare IMAGE, REAL, and IMAGE, VIRTUAL.

IMAGE, AERIAL. Image in space formed by an optical system.

IMAGE, LATENT. See LATENT IMAGE.

IMAGE, REAL. Image through which the light rays actually pass, such as the image formed by a lens on the ground glass or photographic film of a camera. Compare IMAGE, VIRTUAL. Real images are always inverted.

IMAGE, VIRTUAL. An image through which the light rays do not actually pass, e. g., the image formed by an ordinary plane mirror behind the mirror, the rays being reflected from the mirror in such a manner that they appear to the eye to come from behind the mirror. Such an image cannot be shown on a ground-glass screen as can a real image (cf. IMAGE, REAL), nor can it by itself produce photographic action. (You can photograph the virtual image formed by a mirror, but you have to use an additional optical system—you cannot simply put the film behind the mirror where the virtual image is.) Virtual images are never inverted.

IMBIBITION. Absorption of dye by gelatine on a film, in color printing.

IMPEDANCE. (1) Effective opposition of a circuit to current, due to the resistance and reactance of the circuit. Equals voltage divided by current. In a d-c. circuit, impedance equals resistance. (2) Similarly, a load or opposition to the transmission of mechanical or sound energy.

IN-AND-OUT MOVEMENT. That part of the intermittent movement in a motion picture camera which moves the claws in and out of the film perforations.

INCIDENCE, ANGLE OF. See ANGLE OF INCIDENCE.

INDEX OF REFRACTION. See REFRACTION, INDEX OF.

INDUCTANCE. (1) Magnetic flux of any part of an electric circuit, divided by the current producing the flux. A measure of the magnetic opposition to any growth or decay of current. Inductance is of two kinds: self-inductance, due to the current in the circuit itself, and mutual inductance, due to currents in other nearby circuits. See also REACTANCE, INDUCTIVE.
(2) A choke coil, or other device possessing high inductance.

INDUCTION. Phenomenon of changes of electric current in a circuit due to changes in the magnetic flux cutting the circuit. See INDUCTANCE.

INDUCTION COIL. A type of TRANSFORMER, STEP-UP.

INDUCTOR. (1) Any electrical apparatus, or part of one, which acts inductively (see INDUCTION) on another or the same circuit.
(2) Step-down transformer.

INERTIA. (1) Measure of sensitivity (see SENSITIVITY) of a photographic emulsion. The value of exposure at which the straight part of the characteristic curve would, if prolonged, cut the axis of exposure.
(2) Measure of opposition to mechanical movement of a mass.

INFRA-RED rays are invisible rays beyond the red end of the spectrum. Their photographic action is negligibly small. All hot bodies give off large quantities of infra-red rays, which in turn produce heat when absorbed by other bodies.

INKIES. Incandescent lamps.

INTENSITY. (1) Energy crossing a given area in a given time, divided by the product of area and time.
(2) Sometimes used for electric current (quantity per unit time).
(3) For light: intensity of illumination is defined as (1) referred to light energy; but for "luminous intensity" of a source, see LUMINOUS INTENSITY.

INTERFERENCE. Meeting of waves in such a manner as to reinforce or to lessen or cancel one another's effects.

INVERSION. All real images, such as are produced by a photographic lens, are inverted upside-down and right to left.

IONIZATION. Phenomenon which enables a gas to conduct electricity.

IRIS (noun). An adjustable lens diaphragm.

IRIS (verb). Same as IRIS-OUT.

IRIS-IN. To open a diaphragm, somewhere before or behind the photographic lens in a camera, gradually until the full area of the recording frame is exposed. The diaphragm used for this is not the regular lens diaphragm, which has a very rapid movement, but an additional one.

IRIS-OUT. To obliterate the image formed in a camera, by reversing the "irising-in" process. See IRIS-IN.

J

JACK. Hole terminating an electrical circuit, into which a plug may be inserted to continue the circuit. Can be seen on almost any telephone switchboard.

JELLY. Colored gelatine screen placed before electric lamps to change their color values.

JENNY. An electric generator of portable character used on the set.

JOCKEY WALL. Same as WILD WALL.

JUICE. Electric current.

JUICE GANG. Electricians operating lights.

JUICER. An electrician.

K

kc. Abbreviation for KILOCYCLE.

KEYHOLE. Camera mat shaped like a keyhole.

KICK 'EM. Order to electricians to jar arc lights previous to shooting.

KILOCYCLE. Equals one thousand CYCLES. Abbreviation, kc.

KILOWATT. Equals one thousand watts. Abbreviated kw.

KINETIC THEORY. Theory of the motions of the molecules of which matter is composed.

KLIEG LIGHT. Same as BROAD.

NOB TWISTER. Uncomplimentary slang for MONITOR MAN.

kw. Abbreviation for KILOWATT.

L

LABORATORY. Usually means place where films are developed and finished.

LACQUER. Varnish, either colored or transparent, with which nearly all camera parts are coated for protection and finish.

LAMBERT. Unit of brightness. Equals the average brightness of a surface which emits or reflects one lumen per square centimeter of surface.

LAMINATED. Formed of a number of thin sheets.

LAP-DISSOLVE. See DISSOLVE.

LARYNX. Organ of voice, situated at upper part of windpipe. Consists of a box across which are stretched the vocal cords which, by vibration, produce sound.

LATENT IMAGE. An invisible image, on a photographic emulsion, which exists due to the chemical reaction produced in the emulsion by exposure to light.

LATITUDE. Range of exposure obtained by projecting the straight-line portion of the H and D curve onto the exposure axis. A measure of the range of exposure for which the value of gamma is valid.

LEADER. That part of the print from the beginning to the first frame of picture.

LEAK, GRID. See GRID LEAK.

LENS, CENTER. See CENTER LENS.

LENS, COLLECTING. See COLLECTING LENS.

LENS, COMPOUND. Combination of a number of simple lenses.

LENS, CONVERGING. See CONVERGING LENS.

LENS, OBJECTIVE. See OBJECTIVE LENS.

LENS, PROJECTION. See PROJECTION LENS.

LENS, RECTILINEAR. See RECTILINEAR LENS.

LENS, SIMPLE. Lens consisting of but a single piece of glass or other transparent medium.

LENS, TELEPHOTO. See TELEPHOTO LENS.

LENS, WIDE-ANGLE. Short-focus lens which takes in a wide field of view, from 70° to 100°. See VIEW, ANGLE OF.

LENS, AXIS. Same as OPTICAL AXIS, for a lens.

LENS BARREL. Metal tube in which a lens is mounted.

LENS BOARD. That part of the camera on which the lens is mounted.

LENS HOOD. Tube or box designed to protect the lens from light not wanted in the image, such as strong side lights or direct sunlight.

LENS MOUNT. In many cameras the lens is also the focusing device.

LEVEL. Refers to loudness. See also SENSATION LEVEL.

LIGHT FLUX. See LUMINOUS FLUX.

LIGHT-VALVE. An apparatus for transforming small variations in an electric current into variations in the width of a beam of light transmitted by the apparatus.

LINE OF FORCE. See MAGNETIC FIELD.

LINEAR. Two quantities are said to have a linear relation when multiplying one by a given factor automatically multiplies the other by the same factor. Thus, there is a linear relation between the distance a car travels and the number of times its wheels revolve.

LIVE STAGE. (1) Stage enclosed by materials which do not absorb much of the sound from within the stage.
(2) Stage in use or held for use, and usually so marked.

LOAD. The amount of electric power being drawn from the generators or mains.

LOADED. Of sound or camera magazines: filled with film.

LOADING COIL. Type of inductance coil.

LOCK 'EM UP. Generally a command to close up camera booths with cameras and men inside so noise will not affect microphones.

LOGARITHM. If x raised to the y-th power equals z, then the logarithm of z, to the base x, is y.

LOGARITHMIC INVOLUTE. A kind of spiral curve, as on a phonograph record.

LOGARITHMIC RELATION. If multiplying one quantity by a given factor automatically multiplies another quantity by the logarithm of that factor, the relation between the two quantities is logarithmic.

LONG-SHOT. A scene photographed, utilizing the entire angle of the view of the camera lens, with the lens focused for objects at practically infinite distance. Long-shots include scenes which are general in their character—scenes of wide scope; the general assemble; the full room with all characters included; full length exterior scenes; landscapes with characters included; etc. For long-shots, lenses of short focus—from two inches to about one inch—are generally used.

LOOPS are left between the two sprockets, in photography, printing, or projection, to permit the part of the film which is being exposed to have the necessary intermittent motion.

LOSS. (1) Any piece of apparatus which decreases the energy output of the circuit in which it is placed.
(2) Ratio of output to input energy, in such a case.

LOST. (Colloq.) Not functioning.

LOUDSPEAKER. Device which, receiving an amplified varying electric current, transforms the current variations into mechanical vibrations, thus setting up sound waves.

LOW-PASS FILTER. See FILTER, LOW-PASS.

LUG. Metal wire terminal.

LUMEN. Unit of luminous flux. A source, whose luminous intensity in all directions is one candlepower, emits 4 π lumens.

LUMINOSITY CURVE. For any light source, a curve showing the variation of emitted light with wave-length (color) along the spectrum.

LUMINOUS FLUX. Equals amount of luminous energy flowing per unit time. Luminous energy represents light energy evaluated according to the luminous sensation produced in the human eye.

LUMINOUS INTENSITY. The luminous intensity of a light source in any direction, is the luminous flux per steradian (unit solid angle) in that direction.

M

m. Abbreviation for METERS.

MAG. Playback horn.

MAGAZINE. Camera or projector camera compartment (necessarily light-tight in a camera) holding the roll of unexposed film; also the compartment holding the roll of exposed film.

MAGAZINE VALVE, or MAGAZINE VALVE FIRE-TRAP. Narrow opening, formed by two rollers, through which film passes in or out of projector magazines. The opening is so tight that no air can pass; hence the valve prevents flames from entering the magazine in case of fire.

MAGNASCOPe (Magnascope). An extra lens attachment to enlarge the image thrown from the projector.

MAGNET, PERMANENT. Magnet that retains its magnetism; contrasted with electromagnet.

MAGNETIC FIELD. Region of magnetic influence surrounding a magnetic pole, and traversed by magnetic "lines of force," so that a magnetic needle (if free to move) will take up a definite position along a line of force.

MAGNETIC FLUX. "Lines of magnetic force" flowing from a magnet, proportional to its magnetic pole strength.

MARKER. Device for making the negative, either photographically or mechanically, for locating points of synchronism between pictures and sound.

MASKS. Opaque or semi-transparent plates of various sizes or shapes, used in cameras or projectors to limit the effective area of the picture. Example, KEYHOLE. A mask may also be used to cover the sound track when desired.

MASTER NEGATIVE. Same as MATRIX.

MASTER POSITIVE. Same as MOTHER.

SOUND IN PRODUCTION

The introduction of sound into motion pictures so far has caused the investment of approximately $65,000,000 in equipment and untold millions in other expenditures.

It has changed the style of production, the style of product, has caused the construction of more than 100 sound stages, the installation of equipment valued at millions of dollars, the elimination of old talent and the introduction of new talent, and the addition of approximately 5,000 employees in the studios.

Sound holds the stage in 1931, with the exception of one major picture, Charles Chaplin's "City Lights" (which embodies sound effects and music, though no dialogue.)

On January 1, 1931, there was in no major studio any production of any major silent picture.

During 1930 it was estimated that 99 per cent of all pictures produced were made in sound or were all talking.

Types Used by Studios

At the present time, Electrical Research Products, Inc. (Erpi), manufacturing subsidiary of Western Electric, producing sound recording apparatus of the variable density type, has equipped the following major studios:

- Paramount-Publix
- United Artists
- Warner Brothers
- First National
- Fox Pictures Corporation
- Metropolitan Sound Studios
- Universal Pictures Corporation

Radio Corporation of America with Photophone, built on the principle of variable area, has equipped:

- Columbia Pictures Corporation
- Radio Pictures
- Pathe
- Tiffany

About twenty-five independent producers of sound apparatus are seeking recognition on the market and their products are being used mainly by small independent producers. A survey reveals proportionately more sales of sound reproducing apparatus to exhibitors by independent manufacturers than of sound recording apparatus to producers.

Films recorded by either Western Electric or RCA equipment are interchangeable, and can be used by any exhibitor.

The variable density principle involves the shading of the sound track with dark lines. The variable area principle is utilized by widening or narrowing the sound track to vary the light impulse, which, in turn, is turned into sound.

Estimates have been given that the costs of making a picture under the all-talking regime at the present time is from five to seven times the cost of making an all-silent picture. No definite figures have been given by any major studio to afford a comparison.

The increased cost of production involves the installation of new equipment as overhead, the employment of new talent and the loss of value of some of the old box office names, the employment of additional writers, purchase of new kinds of equipment, loss of time through experimentation, and the use of more film.

Outdoor Film Tendency

The 1931 tendency toward outdoor pictures is evident, and has come with the perfection of microphones, attachments and accessories, and the realization by technicians that outdoor work may be done successfully. At the end of 1930 "The Great Meadow," "The Big Trail," "Cimarron" and "Billy the Kid" were examples of the development from sound stage technique.

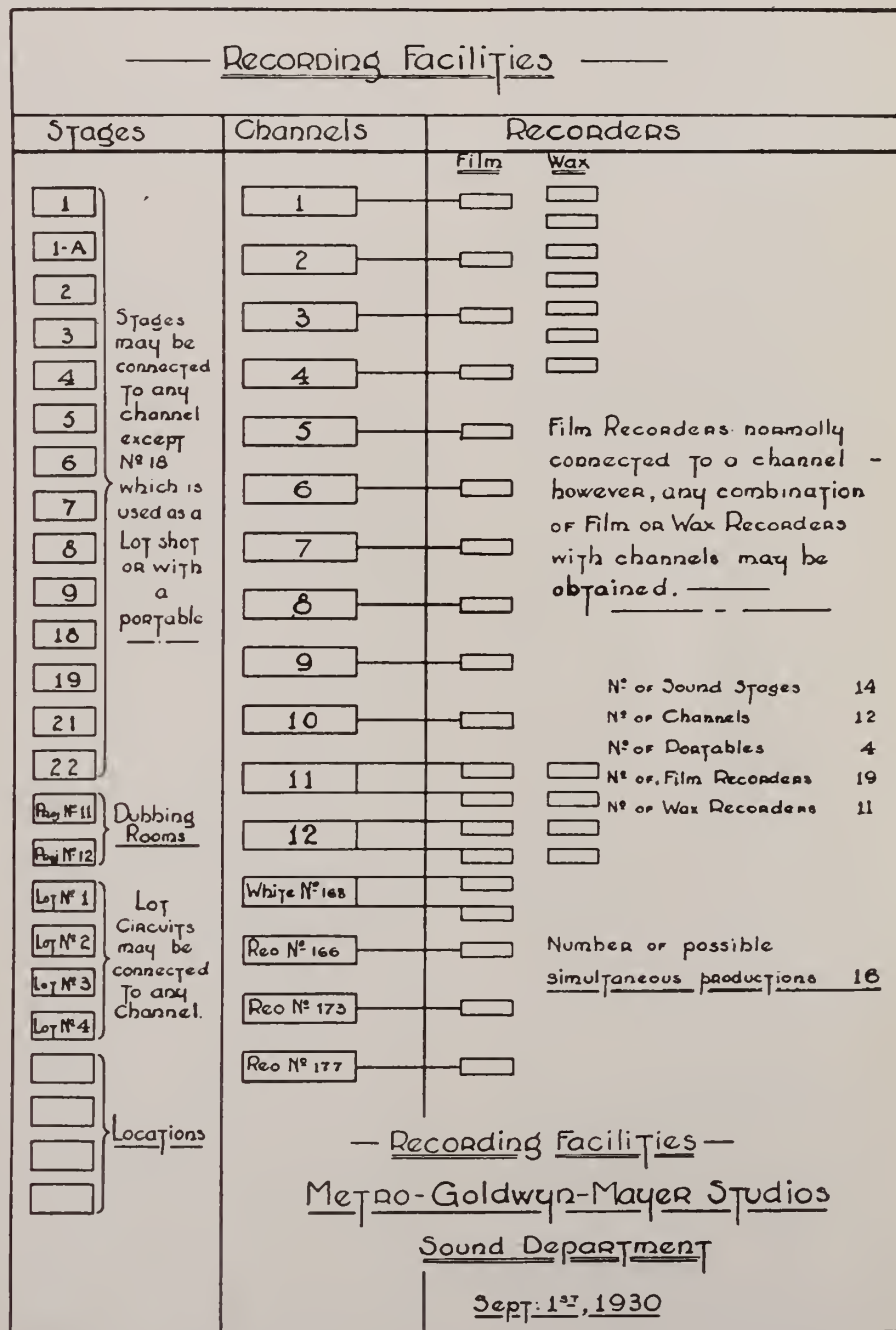

At the present time a survey reveals that 60 per cent of all exhibitors are using the sound track method of projection, while 40 per cent are using the disc.

Until late in 1930, Warner Brothers and First National were producing all pictures on disc only, but by the beginning of 1931 a switch to doth disc and sound track was underway.

The change from disc to sound track is laid chiefly to the claim that the disc is cumbersome and hard to handle. It was also pointed out that more operations are necessary to get the sound onto disc than to get it onto the sound track.

Directors are swinging away from music in films, and will continue to do so during 1931, the survey indicates. There also is a tendency to swing from dialogue to silence in many sequences. During the

MAT. Same as MASK.

MATRIX. Impression obtained by electroplating of wax disc containing original sound record.

MEAN FREE PATH. Average distance which a wave (or particle) travels before encountering any object.

MEGOHM. Equals one million ohms.

MEMBRANE, DRUM. See DRUM MEMBRANE.

METER. (1) Unit of length in the metric system; equals 100 centimeters or 39.37 inches. Abbreviated m.

(2) Measuring instrument (e.g., voltmeter, frequency meter).

METER, HARVEY. See HARVEY METER.

METER, HEYDE. See HEYDE METER.

mfd. Abbreviation for MICROFARAD.

MICROFARAD. Equals one one-millionth of a FARAD. Abbreviated mfd.

MICROPHONE. Device for converting sound waves into variations in an electric current. See also CONDENSER MICROPHONE.

MICROPHONE BOOM. Crane-like device for supporting and manipulating microphone.

MICROWATT. One one-millionth of a watt.

MIKE. Slang for MICROPHONE.

MIKE, SCRATCH THE. To rub the finger over the metal screen in front of the microphone, in order to enable the mixer to find which line the mike is connected to.

MIKE, SLICE THE. See SLICE THE MIKE.

MIKE STEW. Undesired sounds heard by mixer.

MIL. One one-thousandth of an inch.

MIL, CIRCULAR. Area of a circle one mil in diameter.

MILLI. Prefix meaning one one-thousandth.

MILLIMETER. Equals 1/10 centimeter, 1/1,000 meter, or .039,37 inch. Abbreviated mm or m/m.

MIRROR ARC. See ARC, MIRROR.

MIX. To operate the MIXER (1).

MIXER. (1) In recording, the apparatus which terminates the circuits from all microphones, and contains controls so that the recording apparatus will receive proper intensities from the various microphones.

(2) The operator of MIXER, (1).

mm. Abbreviation for MILLIMETERS.

MODULATE. To cause to vary from a normal value.

MONAURAL. Involving only one ear.

MONITORING. Listening, by means of monitoring horn or receivers, to sound being recorded for purposes of control of volume and quality.

MONITORING LOUDSPEAKER. Loudspeaker for MONITORING, (1).

MONITOR MAN. Same as MIXER, (2).

MONOCHROMATIC. Single-colored.

MOTHER. Impression of MATRIX obtained by electroplating.

MOTOR. Almost always refers to an electric motor.

MOTOR REGULATOR. Adjustable rheostat used to vary motor speed.

MOTORBOATING. Of a recording system, producing sounds like a motor-boat exhaust, due to low-frequency oscillations in an amplifier circuit.

MOTOR-GENERATOR. Motor and generator connected together. The motor, driven by an electrical circuit, drives the generator for another circuit using a different voltage.

MOVEMENT, IN-AND-OUT. See IN-AND-OUT MOVEMENT.

MOVIOLA. Mounted peep-sight projection machine, in which the picture is seen through a small glass window and the sound is heard by means of ear-phones. Used by film cutters to expedite their work.

MOVIE-TONE (Movietone). (1) A method of variable density sound recording utilizing a slit of constant width and an Aeolight. (2) (movietone). Any variable density method of sound-on-film recording.

MOVING PERIOD. That portion of the picture cycle (in recording or in projection) during which the film at the aperture is in motion, expressed in degrees of revolution of the controlling flywheel ($360^\circ=1$ cycle).

M. Q. Abbreviation for metol quinol, active ingredient of a commonly used developer.

MULTICOLOR (Multicolor). A type of subtractive process for obtaining color films. Two negative films are used, or else a SANDWICH FILM negative; the front one records the blue and green components of the scene; a dye permits only the orange and red components to pass to the back negative, which is panchromatic. The negatives are developed and printed in the normal manner on two sides of the same film. The two prints are then chemically converted respectively, blue-green and orange-red, in such a manner as to approximate the original colors; the print is then varnished for protection.

MULTIPHASE. Same as POLYPHASE.

MUTUAL INDUCTANCE. See INDUCTANCE.

N

NATURAL FREQUENCY, NATURAL PERIOD. A FREQUENCY and PERIOD at which a certain body (or a certain electric circuit) vibrates most readily.

NEGATIVE. (1) Film developed after exposure in the camera. On the negative, dark and light are reversed from the objects photographed.

(2) By analogy, a disc record in which the groove waves appear on relief, instead of indented as in the final record.

NEON ARC. Resembles NEON LAMP hut is a long tube utilizing high voltage and high current.

NEON LAMP. Small bulb containing no matter except a little neon gas and two electrodes. When current is passed through this, the tube glows with a red light. It is very sensitive to small changes in current, and varies its brightness accordingly.

NIGGER. Black panel suspended from a boom or bar and used to shield the lens from certain high lights. A type of Gobo.

NITRATE FILM. Film whose BASE is composed mainly of cellulose nitrate.

NO BOTTOM. Sound deficient in low frequencies.

NON-LINEAR RESPONSE. See LINEAR.

O

OBJECTIVE. In a system of lenses, the lens nearest the object being viewed or photographed. In projection, the lens nearest the screen.

OBSERVATION PORT. Opening in the wall of the projection room through which the projectionist observes the screen.

OFF THE LINE! Throw switches to disconnect all recording machine motors.

O. K. ON THE BLOPS. Sound-on-film reproducing system is complete.

O. K. ON THE CLICKS. Sound-on-disc reproducing system is complete.

ON THE LINE! Switch all recording machine motors into circuit.

ONE BELL. At certain studios, signal for silence at beginning of a take.

OPACITY. Reciprocal of TRANSMISSION (i.e., equals unity divided by transmission).

OPTICAL AXIS. Straight line through the centers of the light source, lenses, diaphragm, etc., of an optical system, to which their planes are in general perpendicular.

OPTICAL PRINTER. See PRINTER, OPTICAL.

OPTICAL SCRATCH. Defect on sound track, occurring as a line parallel to the edges of the film, due to a particle of dust or mechanical imperfection in the slit through which light was sent to the sound track.

OPTICAL SYSTEM. Any apparatus which transmits and alters rays of light.

ORDER WIRE. Interconnecting telephone network for one channel.

ORDINAL RESPONSE, or ORDINAL RELATION. Said to occur when increasing one quantity automatically increases another, and decreasing the one automatically decreases the other. An ordinal relation is not necessarily linear.

ORTHOCHROMATIC EMULSION or FILM is sensitive to yellow and green as well as blue and violet, but not appreciably sensitive to red.

ORTHOCHROMATIC PHOTOGRAPHY. Photography in which colored objects are rendered in monotone according to their true visual brightness.

OSCAR. Slang for OSCILLATIONS.

OSCILLATING CIRCUIT. Electric circuit which offers very little opposition to the establishment of an oscillating current of the frequency to which the circuit is tuned.

OSCILLATIONS. Waves, particularly of high-frequency alternating current.

OSCILLOGRAM. The record produced by an OSCILLOGRAPH.

OSCILLOGRAPH. The device used for recording vibrations.

OUTSIDE LINES. The area beyond the camera's visual angle.

OVERALL. Involving all factors which enter into a process.

OVERCUT. See CUT OVER.

OVERDONE. Badly overdeveloped.

OVERSHOOTING OF SOUND. See SOUND OVERSHOOTING.

OVERTONE. Any vibration of higher frequency than the fundamental. Generally one whose frequency equals the fundamental frequency multiplied by an integer (whole number).

PAM or PAN. Contraction of PANORAMA.

PANCHROMATIC EMULSION or FILM is sensitive to all visible colors.

PANEL. Heavy sheet of insulating material on which electrical apparatus is mounted.

PANORAM. Same as PANORAMA HEAD.

PANORAMA. Rotation of a motion picture camera in the horizontal plane, without changing the position of the tripod.

PANORAMA HEAD. Revolving device on camera tripod, to permit taking of panoramas.

PAPER CONDENSER. See CONDENSER, PAPER.

PARTIAL. Same as OVERTONE, in the usual sense of the latter.

PATCH-BAY. Relay rack in which the circuits from all recording positions (either on the stage or outside) terminate. Any trunk may be connected with any other through the equipment of the patch-bay.

PEC or P. E. C. Contraction of PHOTOELECTRIC CELL.

PERIOD. Time occupied by one cycle of a wave. The reciprocal of frequency.

PERIOD, NATURAL. See NATURAL PERIOD.

PERIOD, MOVING. See MOVING PERIOD.

PERIOD, PROJECTION. See PROJECTION PERIOD.

PERIOD, STATIONARY. See STATIONARY PERIOD.

PERMEABILITY. A quantity measuring the susceptibility of a substance (generally containing iron) to magnetization.

PERSISTENCE OF VISION. Property of the human eye which causes an impression of an image to persist for a short time after the light causing the image has ceased.

PHASE. Degree to which a whole wave or vibration is displaced from a standard position.

PHASE, IN. Coinciding in vibration or rotation.

PHASE, FIRST. See FIRST PHASE.

PHASE, SINGLE. Generated and distributed a c involving only two wires and a single voltage wave.

PHASE, THREE. Generated and distributed a c involving three or four wires, employing three currents whose waves are not in the same phase.

PHASE, TWO. Same as three-phase, but involves only two currents.

PHASED. Ready to start in synchronism—said of motors for driving sound—and picture-recording equipment.

PHOT. Metric unit of illumination. Equals intensity of illumination on a surface in lumens, divided by area of the surface in sq cm.

PHOTOACTIVE. Sensitive to light, as photographically or photoelectrically (cf. PHOTOELECTRIC EFFECT).

PHOTOCELL. Contraction of PHOTOELECTRIC CELL.

PHOTOELECTRIC CELL, PHOTOELECTRIC EFFECT. Certain chemical elements emit electrons when exposed to light of certain wave-lengths (colors), the number of electrons emitted depending on the intensity of the light. This effect enables us to transform light into electricity, since electrons in motion constitute an electric current. In a photoelectric cell, a piece of such an element is used as a cathode; the freed electrons flow to a plate (the anode) and a current flows in the external circuit. These cells do not contain air, which would chemically attack the sensitive element. Abbreviation, PEC.

PHOTOELECTRIC-CELL AMPLIFIER. Amplifier which first amplifies the small current from a photoelectric cell.

PHOTOELECTRONS. Electrons liberated by light when the photoelectric effect takes place.

PHOTOGRAPHIC EFFICIENCY. See EFFICIENCY, PHOTOGRAPHIC.

PHOTOMETER. Any device for measuring light intensity.

PHOTOPHONE (Photophone). A variable area method of recording sound on film; also the method of reproducing the sound.

PICK-UP, A-C. See A-C PICK-UP.

PICK-UP, SOUND. See SOUND PICK-UP.

PICTURE CYCLE. Entire series of mechanical operations which takes place between the positioning of one frame of film and the positioning of the next frame.

PILLOW DISTORTION. Lens fault which causes the images of parallel lines to curve inward toward one another.

PIPE IT DOWN! Same as DOWN THE CHUTE.

PITCH. (1) That property of sound which is determined by the frequency of the sound waves. SEE FREQUENCY.
(2) Distance from the center of one perforation on a film to the next; or from one thread of a screw to the next; or from one curve of a spiral to the next.

PLATE. The anode of a vacuum tube or photoelectric cell.

PLATE BATTERY. Same as "B" BATTERY.

PLAYBACK. (1) Reproduction of a sound taken from the wax disc for critical purposes.
(2) Special, extremely light reproducer, for use on the original wax record before the disc is electroplated.

PLUG. Terminal of an electric wire, made for insertion into jacks.

PLUG 'EM IN! Take the second step in preparing cameras and recording machines for synchronization.

POLARIZING VOLTAGE. Voltage determining the direction of current in a circuit.

POLYPHASE. Includes TWO-PHASE, THREE-PHASE, and higher numbers of phases, in a-c circuits.

PORT, OBSERVATION. See OBSERVATION PORT.

POSITIVE. (1) Film onto which light is sent through the negative, in order to print densities corresponding substantially to dark and light on the original objects. (CF. NEGATIVE.)
(2) By analogy, a disc record in which the grooves are indented (as in the final record instead of raised).

POST-SCORING. Addition of music and/or dialogue to a picture which has already been photographed.

POTENTIAL. Level of electric pressure.

POTENTIOMETER. Device controlling or measuring the electromotive force (voltage) across one or more circuits, by placing each of these in parallel with a variable part of a fixed resistance.

POWER. Rate of doing work or producing energy. Equals work or energy divided by time taken to produce it.

POWER AMPLIFICATION (of an amplifier). The ratio of the alternating-current power produced in the output circuit to the alternating-current power supplied to the input circuit.

POWER AMPLIFIER. (1) An amplifier capable of handling large amounts of electrical energy.
(2) Specifically any of the amplifiers used to magnify the currents obtained from the gain amplifier.

POWER STAGE. The final stage of amplification.

POWER TUBE. A high-output vacuum tube.

PRE-SCORING. Preparation of a sound record to correspond with a scene not yet photographed.

PRINT (noun). The POSITIVE after exposure and development.

PRINT (verb). To produce a POSITIVE film.

PRINTER. Machine for the exposure of PRINTS.

PRINTER, CONTACT. In this type of PRINTER the positive and negative are in direct contact as each frame is exposed.

PRINTER, OPTICAL. In this type of PRINTER the light transmitted by the negative passes through an optical system before reaching the positive it affects. (Compare PRINTER, CONTACT.) Such a printer permits various effects such as changes in apparent speed of recorded motions, or variations in size of image.

PRINTER LIGHT. In PRINTING, the source lamp.

PRINTING. Process of making a positive from a negative.

PRINTING, DOUBLE. See DOUBLE PRINTING.

PROBUS PAINT has a high resistance to chemical action, and is therefore much used for painting tanks and trays used in photographic development.

PROCESSING. Generally means all treatment of a film subsequent to exposure.

PROJECTION, AXIS OF. Straight line from center of aperture to center of image on screen.

PROJECTION BOOTH. Booth containing projection equipment. See discussion under PROJECTION ROOM.

PROJECTION DISTANCE. Distance from projection lens to screen.

PROJECTION LENS. In projection, the objective lens.

PROJECTION PERIODS. Total fraction of the picture cycle during which the picture is being projected. Cf. MOVING PERIOD, STATIONARY PERIOD.

PROJECTION ROOM. There is some confusion in the use of this term. It is common studio practice to refer to the small viewing rooms or theatres on the lot where dailies are shown as projection rooms. Projectionists, however, use the term to apply specifically to the room in which the projection equipment is located. The word projection booth is virtually obsolete.

PROJECTOR. Machine used to project motion pictures.

PROJECTOR, CONTINUOUS. See CONTINUOUS PROJECTOR.

PUSH-PULL AMPLIFIER. An amplifying apparatus, employing two amplifier tubes, designed to obtain greater amplification with less distortion.

Q

QUALITY. That characteristic of sounds produced by some particular instrument or voice, by which they are distinguished from sounds of the same loudness and fundamental pitch, produced by other instruments or voices.

QUARTZ lenses transmit ultra-violet light (to which most glass is opaque) and therefore have high speed; but the images are soft, so that such lenses are unsuitable for obtaining sharp detail.

R

RACK. Frame upon which film is wound for tank development.

RADIO FREQUENCY. Any frequency above about 10,000 cycles per second.

RAINBOW NEGATIVE. An ORTHOCHROMATIC (more sensitive to green than normal orthochromatic negative), dyed red. Used as the front negative in MULTICOLOR photography.

RAISE. Opposite of DROP.

RATTLE, LOUDSPEAKER, is something heard in reproduction due to the vibration of an element within the loudspeaker unit, usually occurring when the sound volume is large.

RAW. Of positive or negative film, means unexposed.

REACTANCE. An electric circuit opposes a varying current not only by virtue of resistance, but also by virtue of its tendency to oppose the variation in the current. Reactance is a measure of this latter tendency. It involves no loss of energy, but simply causes a displacement in time between variation in voltage and variation in current. Reactance is of two sorts: inductive reactance, due to inductance; and capacitive reactance, due to changes of electric charge in any condensers which are in the circuit. The greater the frequency of a c the greater the inductive reactance of the circuit, and the less the capacitive reactance.

REACTOR. High-inductance coil. See INDUCTANCE.

REAL IMAGE. See IMAGE, REAL.

RECORDER. (1) Apparatus for recording sound.
(2) Essential element of such an apparatus.
(3) Sometimes used for RECORIST.

RECORDING AMPLIFIER. The POWER AMPLIFIER used to operate the sound-recording device (wax cutter, Aeolight, light-valve, or Photophone galvanometer, as the case may be).

RECORDING DRUM. Drum over which the film runs as it is exposed in the recorder.

RECORDIST. Person engaged in recording sound.

RECTIFIER. Apparatus to change alternating to pulsating direct current.

RECTILINEAR LENS. Lens which produces undistorted images of parallel lines.

RED LIGHT. (1) (Red Bull's Eye.) In certain studios, signal that everything is ready for the action to commence.
(2) (Refer to small red light on the same panel as (1).) Signal that the recorder is ready.

REDUCE. In chemistry, refers to a chemical action such as the change of silver bromide to silver.

REDUCER. Solution for reducing the density of a photographic image.

REDUCTION FACTOR. Factor less than unity.

REEL. (1) Flanged metal spool on which film is wound.
(2) Unit of motion picture length, about 1,000 feet of film.
(3) Short play about one reel (2) in length.

REEL, FEED. See FEED REEL.

REEL, SPIRAL. Developing rack which holds the film in a spiral.

REEL, TAKE-UP. See TAKE-UP REEL.

REFLECTING POWER of a surface, is the ratio of reflected to incident intensity of light.

REFLECTION, ANGLE OF. See ANGLE OF REFLECTION.

REFLECTOR ARC. See ARC, REFLECTOR.

REFRACTION. Bending of a wave of sound or light when it passes from one medium to another of different density.

REFRACTION, INDEX OF, of a given material, is the ratio of the speed of light in a vacuum (or, for practical purposes, in air) to the speed of light in that medium. The index determines the amount of bending which light rays will undergo when entering or leaving the material. The greater the index (above 1), the steeper will an entering light ray be bent toward the perpendicular; on leaving, the ray resumes its original direction.

REGULATOR, MOTOR. See MOTOR REGULATOR.

RELAY. Device by means of which electric power in one circuit controls electric power (generally greater) in another circuit.

RELOAD. To replace an exhausted camera magazine or sound magazine with a full one.

RELUCTANCE. Opposition to magnetic flux.

RERECORD. To make one sound record from another, electrically. Cf. DUBBING.

RESOLVING POWER. Ability to distinguish detail.

RESONANCE POINT. Same as NATURAL FREQUENCY or NATURAL PERIOD, as the case may be.

RESONATOR. Body or circuit characterized by resonance, particularly one which has a variety of resonant frequencies.

RETORT. Same as MAGAZINE.

RESONANCE. Response of a vibrating body, or of an electric circuit to vibrations impressed upon it, particularly to those which have the same frequency as a NATURAL FREQUENCY of the body or circuit. Vibrations at such a frequency tend to have a greater amplitude than vibrations at any other frequency; consequently the body or circuit re-radiates a comparatively large amount of energy at that frequency, and re-enforces any waves (sound or electrical, as the case may be) of that frequency which reach it.

REVERBERATION. Persistence of sound in an enclosed space, due to reflection from the walls.

REVERBERATION, TIME OF. Time required for a reverberating sound to die away to one one-millionth of the intensity of the original sound.

REWIND. To reverse the winding of a film, usually so that the end to be first projected shall lie on the outside of the roll.

REWINDER. Machine for rewinding.

RHEOSTAT. Instrument placed in an electric circuit to supply a resistance (generally a definite known resistance) variable at will.

RHEOSTAT, FIELD, controls the field current of a generator or motor, consequently controls the magnetic field acting, and thus regulates the output of the machine.

RIBBON. Refers to the loop of tape in a LIGHT-VALVE.

RIFLE. One-bulb lamp with corrugated mirror reflector.

RING, TUBE. See TUBE RING.

ROTARY. An arc lamp in which carbon electrodes are revolved and kept at the desired distance apart by means of an auxiliary motor.

rmp. Abbreviation for revolutions per minute.

rps. Abbreviation for revolutions per second.

RUNAWAY. Abnormal speed of a motor at starting, due to some abnormal condition in its circuit.

RUNOUT. That part of the print from the last frame of the picture to the end.

RUSHES. Same as DAILIES.

RUSTLE, VALVE. See VALVE RUSTLE.

S

SAFETY FILM has a base of acetate which is slow-burning, and so is less inflammable than ordinary nitrate film.

SANDWICH FILM. Either positive or negative film having two sensitive emulsions on one side of its transparent base, the two emulsions being separated by a sub-stratum of a transparent, or dyed, gelatin. Used in MULTICOLOR printing.

SATURATION OF COLOR. Ratio of white to MONOCHROMATIC LIGHT in a mixture which appears identical with the color in question.

SCALE. Portion of the density axis which corresponds to the straight portion of the H and D curve. A measure of the range of densities for which the constant value of gamma is valid.

SCOOP. Hanging or suspended BROAD.

SCORING. Preparation of a sound record (usually musical) separately from the picture which is to accompany it. See POST-SCORING, PRE-SCORING.

SCRATCH. OPTICAL or SHADOW. See OPTICAL SCRATCH.

SCRATCH FILTER. A choke coil and condenser used to filter out very high frequency sounds or ground noises—usually the needle scratch in wax reproduction.

SCRATCH THE MIKE. See MIKE, SCRATCH THE.

SCREEN GRID TUBE. A modified type of vacuum tube with high amplification. A fourth electrode—the screen grid—is used to reduce the electrostatic effect between grid and plate.

SCREW, DRUNKEN. Irregular tongue or groove, on the cam of the intermittent camera movement, which forces the claws in and out of the perforations in the film, to draw the film past the gate.

SENSATIONAL LEVEL. Refers to loudness of sound, in decibels, compared to the intensity of sound of the same pitch which would be just barely audible in quiet surroundings.

SENSATIONAL UNIT. Same as DECIBEL.

SENSIBILITY. Ability to detect small differences in energy.

SENSITIVITY. Ability to detect small amounts of energy.

SENSITOMETRY. Measurement of response of light-sensitive substances (photographic emulsions, the eye, etc.) to radiation.

SHADOW SCRATCH. Same as OPTICAL SCRATCH.

SHOULDER. Over-exposure region of the characteristic curve of a photographic emulsion.

SHREDDED WHEAT. Film which has been badly cut due to having buckled and run off the sprockets.

SHUTTER. Generally means SHUTTER, FLICKER.

SHUTTER, AUTOMATIC. In a projector, a fire prevention device which falls into place between light source and film whenever the motor stops.

SHUTTER, FLICKER. Moving (usually rotating) device, which intercepts the beam of light in a motion picture camera, printer, or projector, once during each picture cycle. A different device from SHUTTER, AUTOMATIC.

SILK (noun). (1) Piece of soft silk placed over a light to soften it.

SILK (verb). To put the silk in place.

SIMPLE LENS. See LENS, SIMPLE.

SING. Undesirable high-frequency oscillations in the recording circuit.

SINK. Synchronization.

SLICE THE MIKE. To place the microphone at an angle to the source of sound (instead of directly facing it).

SLOW. Cf. SPEED.

SOAK. To soak batteries is to charge them heavily.

SOFT. (1) Of a vacuum tube, containing a little residual gas.

(2) Of a focus, see FOCUS, SOFT.

SOUND GATE. Gate, similar to that used in picture projectors, through which the sound track is pulled past the reproducing light beam in gate-type machines.

SOUND HEAD. Compartment on the projector which contains sound-reproducing systems and mechanism for guiding and driving film.

SOUND OVERSHOOTING. In variable area recording, this refers to the condition where the peaks in the sound track extend beyond the limits of the track and are therefore cut off during reproduction. In variable density recording, this refers to excessively dense areas on the track. In either case, the quality of reproduced sound is affected.

SOUND PICK-UP. Device or system for reproducing sound. In disc reproduction, an electromagnetic device which transforms the waves in the grooves of the disc into variations of electric current. In film reproduction, an optical-electrical system contained in the sound head.

SOUND TRACK. A narrow band, along a film (on the left side of the picture) which carries the sound record.

SOUNDING BOARD. Board whose forced vibrations increase the intensity of sound from any vibrating body attached to the board.

SOUP. Slang for DEVELOPER.

SPARK GAP. Short break in an electric circuit, forming an air condenser. If the voltage across it becomes sufficiently high, a spark discharge will take place across it.

SPEAKER. Contraction for LOUDSPEAKER.

SPECIFIC GRAVITY of a substance is the ratio of the weight of a given volume of that substance to the weight of an equal volume of water.

SPECTROGRAM. Photographic representation of energy distribution along a spectrum.

SPECTROPHOTOMETRY. Science of measuring the distribution of energy along the spectrum.

SPECTROSCOPE. Instrument for analyzing light into its component colors.

SPECTRUM. Any arrangement of waves in the order of their frequencies. For light waves, the order of the spectrum, beginning with the highest frequencies, is: ultra-violet, violet, indigo, blue, green, yellow, orange, red, infra-red. If these were taken in the order of wave-lengths, beginning with the highest, the order would be reversed from that just given.

SPECULAR DENSITY. The value of density obtained when transmission is measured for highly collimated (and therefore mostly parallel) light—as in optical printing or in projection.

SPEED. (1) Of an emulsion: measure of the emulsion's sensibility to light. (See SENSIBILITY, Inversely proportional to INERTIA.) (2) Of a lens: measure of the amount of light the lens can collect. Proportional to the square of the EFFECTIVE APERTURE.

SPIDER. Portable electric switch and contact.

SPIRAL REEL. See REEL, SPIRAL.

SPLICE. To join the ends of film by cementing.

SPLICE BUMP. Same as BLOOP.

SPOOR-BERGGREN. In this WIDE FILM system the film width is 63.5 mm.

SPOT. (1) Illuminated area on the cooling plate of a projector.

(2) Contraction for SPOTLIGHT.

SPOTLIGHT. Lighting unit which projects a concentrated spot of light.

SPROCK. Slang for SPROCKET HUM.

SPROCKET. Toothed cylinder engaging the perforations in the film.

SPROCKET HUM or SPROCKET NOISE. 96-cycle note produced when the film runs through the pickup mechanism out of line so that the exciting light beam for the sound track passes through one edge of the sprocket holes.

STAMPER. Impression of MOTHER, obtained by electroplating. Used in a hydraulic press to stamp out the final playing records.

STANDARD FILM has a width of 35 mm.

STARTING BOX. Rheostat used to control current supplied to a motor during starting, to prevent damage to the motor winding.

STATIONARY PERIOD. That portion of the picture cycle during which the film at the aperture is stationary, expressed in degrees of revolution of the controlling flywheel ($360^\circ = 1$ cycle).

STEP PRINTER. Machine which prints a positive, a frame at a time.

STEP-DOWN and STEP-UP TRANSFORMERS. See TRANSFORMER.

STEREOSCOPIC. Giving the illusion of looking into depth, as the two eyes perceive in actuality.

STEW. Undesired sounds (usually produced by defective equipment) particularly those heard in reproduction.

STILL. Ordinary photograph, as distinguished from a motion picture.

STILL MAN. The photographer who makes the stills.

STINEMANN (Stinemann). System (named after inventor) of developing motion picture film in portable laboratory apparatus.

STOCK. Unexposed photographic film.

STOP. Lens diaphragm opening.

STOPPING CONDENSER. See CONDENSER, STOPPING.

STORAGE BATTERY. A battery which can be re-charged (i.e., have its electromotive force restored) by running a current through it in the direction opposite to its electromotive force.

STRAIGHT-LINE PORTION. Refers to that of an H and D CURVE.

STRETCH. To introduce additional frames, during printing, in order to slow up the reproduction of the motions pictured.

STRING. (1) Ribbon of a light-valve.

(2) Suspension of a photophone galvanometer.

STRING GALVANOMETER. See GALVANOMETER, STRING.

STYLUS. Sharp cutting point.

SU. See DECIBEL.

SUBSTANDARD FILM has width less than the standard 35 mm.

SUBTRACTIVE PROCESS. Color process in which various hues are obtained by the absorption, in varying degree, of one or more of the spectral colors comprising white light. In cinematography such a process utilizes colored prints. Compare ADDITIVE PROCESS.

SUN ARC. Type of SUN LAMP. An arc using high intensity elements. Generally made in mirror diameters of 24, 36 and 60 inches and consuming a current of about 150 amperes.

SUN LAMPS. A large lamp (SUN ARC or SUN SPOT) reflecting its light by means of a parabolic mirror.

SUN SPOT. Incandescent type of SUN LAMP. Power sizes are 2,000, 5,000, and 10,000 watts; generally made in mirror diameters of 18, 24 and 36 inches.

SYNCHRONIZE. To make synchronous; in particular, to add new sound effects or dialogue in synchronism with a picture which has previously been photographed with sound.

SYNCHRONOUS. Simultaneous; corresponding in time. In particular refers to accompaniment of a picture of action by the proper sound corresponding to the action.

SYNCHRONOUS MOTOR. Type of motor whose speed is governed by the standard frequency of the alternating current supplied to it.

SYSTEM "F." See "F" SYSTEM.

SYSTEM "U." See "U" SYSTEM.

SYSTEM, UNIFORM. See UNIFORM SYSTEM.

T

TACHOMETER. Instrument for measuring speed of rotation, as of a motor.

TACK. Slang for TACHOMETER.

TAKE (verb). To photograph or record a scene.

TAKE (noun). (1) Process of recording part of a motion picture, without pause. Refers to the period from the moment when the camera and sound recorder start operating to the moment when they stop.

TAKE-UP. Mechanism by means of which a film is wound upon a reel after passing the aperture (in photography, printing, or projection); also, to wind it thus.

TAKE-UP REEL. Reel on which film is taken-up.

TANK. (1) Portable CAMERA BOOTH.

TANK SYSTEM. Development in a TANK (2) for a time calculated according to the temperature.

TEASER. Same as TORMENTOR.

TECHNICOLOR (Technicolor). A subtractive color process in which an optical system throws two or more separate images on two or more successive frames of the same film, these being photographed simultaneously through different color filters (as red and green). The alternating frames are printed separately; the prints are dyed, and then are treated in such a manner that correctly colored images are transferred by IMBIBITION to another (single) positive print.

TELEPHOTO LENS. Long-focus lens which gives the effect of a close-up although the camera is at a distance. Cf. TELESCOPIC LENS.

TEST. Operation of determining quality or quantity. Specifically: (1) A try-out with camera and/or sound to determine a player's fitness or suitability for a part; or (2) a piece of film made to test the condition of exposure and/or development, or else to determine how a given scene will photograph.

THERMIONIC VACUUM TUBE. See VACUUM TUBE, THERMIONIC.

THIN. Having a thin or transparent silver image—said of a negative or positive.

THREADING-UP. Operation of starting the film through the camera, printer, or projector, as the case may be.

THREE-WIRE SYSTEM of distributing electricity. For alternating current, such a system will be two or three-phase. For direct current, the voltage between one wire and the second ("middle") is approximately equal to that between the third and middle wires; and the middle wire is generally connected to ground.

THROW. Same as PROJECTION DISTANCE.

TILT. To rotate a motion picture camera parallel to the direction of film motion and in a vertical plane through the optical axis.

TIMBRE. Same as QUALITY.

TIME OF REVERBRATION. See REVERBRATION.

TINTING. Coloring of film in whole or part, formerly usually accomplished by dyeing the gelatine side. Now usually done by printing on film with a colored base.

TOE. Underexposure region of the characteristic curve of a photographic emulsion.

TOPE. Musical sound of definite frequency.

TONING. Coloring a film by chemical action on the silver image.

TOP. High-frequency sounds.

TORMENTORS. On sound stages: Large movable panels covered with various materials for controlling acoustics, and so placed in a set that they will not be photographed.

TRACK, SHOW TIE. To remove the sound track mask, in projection, so as to permit an image of the track to appear on the screen besides the pictures.

TRACK, SOUND. See SOUND TRACK.

TRAILER. Piece of blank film attached to the end of a picture series.

TRANSFORMER. Apparatus used in an a-c. circuit to raise (STEP-UP) or lower (STEP-DOWN) to voltage. Consists (in its simplest form) of two coils of wire and a laminated iron core, all insulated from one another. Current in the primary coil sets up magnetic flux around the core; the variations in this flux, due to the variations in the primary current, set up a similarly alternating current in the secondary coil. In general, the voltage across each coil is proportional to the number of turns on the coil; the current in each coil is inversely proportional to the voltage.

TRANSMISSION. Ratio of intensity of light or sound transmitted by a substance, to the amount of intensity originally falling on it.

TRANSMISSION UNIT. See DECIBEL.

TRANSMITTER. Same as MICROPHONE.

TRI-COLOR RATIO. Ratio between inertias of an emulsion for violet and blue, green and yellow, and red.

TRIODE. Three-element electrode vacuum tube.

TU. See DECIBEL.

TUBBY reproduced sound predominates in low frequencies, and sounds as though it originated inside of a tub or barrel.

TUBE RING. Undesirable ringing noise in the recording system, due to vibration of an amplifier tube.

TUNING. Process of adjusting frequency of vibration to secure maximum response, as in a radio.

TURN 'EM OVER. Order to get cameras and recorder into synchronous action.

TURNTABLE. Rotating device on which disc records are mounted.

TWINS. Double arc lamp used in lighting set.

TWO BELLS. At certain studios, signal that preceding take may be broken, and silence is no longer necessary.

U

"U" SYSTEM. See UNIFORM SYSTEM.

ULTRA-VIOLET light rays are invisible rays beyond the violet end of the spectrum. They act strongly on photographic emulsions in the same way as visible light does.

UNDER-MODULATED. Of a sound record; not utilizing enough of the possible recording range of volume.

UNIFORM SYSTEM. System of marking lens diaphragm stops in numbers corresponding though not directly) to their relative speeds. An increase of 1 in the U. S. number corresponds to a 50% decrease of speed, i.e., a doubling of exposure to give the same photographic result. An aperture of F.4 (see "F" SYSTEM) corresponds to 1 in the U. S. system.

UNMODULATED TRACK. That part of a variable density sound track on which no density variations due to sound modulations have been impressed.

V

VACUUM. A space from which nearly all matter has been removed.

VACUUM TUBE, THERMIONIC. Evacuated tube containing a wire filament, a metal plate, and often other electrodes. An electric current is passed into the tube and through the wire filament; the filament becomes hot and electrons are hoiled out of it. A positive voltage being applied to the plate, the electrons flow across the vacuum onto the plate, and thus set an electric current in the outside circuit connected to the plate. In tubes for most purposes there is a third element known as a GRID.

VALVE. Device to regulate flow (as of water, or of a beam of light).

VALVE, LIGHT. See LIGHT VALVE.

VALVE, MAGAZINE. See MAGAZINE VALVE.

VALVE AMPLIFIER. Three-electrode vacuum tube amplifier.

VALVE RUSTLE. Rustling noise heard in reproduction, due to clashing of the light-valve ribbons in the course of recording.

VARIABLE AREA RECORDING. Method of sound recording in which the sound track is dark on one side and transparent on the other, the irregular boundary line between dark and light sides representing the loudness and frequency of the recording sound.

VARIABLE CONDENSER. See CONDENSER, VARIABLE.

VARIABLE DENSITY RECORDING. Method of sound recording in which the sound is recorded as a number of parallel lines perpendicular to the edge of the sound track and extending across its full width. The distance between lines is determined by the frequency of the recorded sound; the density of the lines is determined by the loudness.

VELOCITY CONSTANT. Measure of speed with which an emulsion develops.

V. I. Abbreviation for VOLUME INDICATOR.

VIBRATOR. A vibrating body. In particular, a device used in the RCA Photophone system of sound recording.

VIEW, ANGLE OF. Angle, under which the diameter of the circular area covered sharply by a lens appears from the center of the lens.

VIEWING ROOM. One of the several small theatres on the lot principally used for the showing of DAILIES.

VIOLET RAYS. Sometimes used, incorrectly, for ULTRA-VIOLET RAYS.

VIRTUAL IMAGE. See IMAGE, VIRTUAL.

VITAPHONE (Vitaphone). The Warner Brothers system of disc recording and reproduction of sound.

VOLUME. Same as loudness of sound.

VOLUME INDICATOR. Device for measuring the loudness of sound. Abbreviated V. I.

W

WATT. Unit of power (see POWER). Power employed to do ten million ergs of work in one second. Power produced by a one-ampere current falling through a potential difference of one volt. 746 watts equals one horsepower.

WAVE, CONTINUOUS. See CONTINUOUS WAVES.

WAVE-FRONT. Crest of an advancing wave.

WAVE-LENGTH. Distance between crests along a wave.

WAX STEW. Undesired sound heard on wax record.

WEAK. Of a film, same as THIN.

WHERE IS THE.....? Applied to a recording or variable instrument, means "What is the reading of the....."

WHISKERS. A type of pulsation of intensity in reproduced sound. See Wow-Wows for explanation.

WHISTLE BOX. A movable device, usually only a choke coil, for electrically filtering out the hum in arcs and lamps for sound studios.

WHITE LIGHT. In certain studios, signal that re-recording operator is ready.

WIDE FILM has a width greater than the standard 35 mm.

WIDE-ANGLE LENS. See LENS, WIDE-ANGLE.

WIND WALL. A movable wall, covered with sound-absorbing material, and suitable to be photographed.

WIND-GAG. Silk cloth placed over a microphone to prevent disturbance by wind pressure.

WIRE GAUGE. Diameter of a wire, in one of various systems arranged for convenient designation.

WOW-WOWS. A type of pulsation of intensity in reproduced sound, due fundamentally to change of speed of the sound track during either recording or reproduction. While this change of speed produces a change of pitch, the latter, when the fluctuation is rapid is generally not perceptible but the phenomena of interference of sound waves in the theater cause this change of pitch to produce a rapid periodic change of intensity. Wow-wows correspond to a variation in speed of, say, up to six cycles per second; FLUTTER, to a variation of about six to thirty cycles; GARGLE, 30 to 200 cycles; and WHISKERS, over 200 cycles.

X

X-BACK. Negative film coated on the back with gelatine, to eliminate frictional electricity, which causes marks on the film.

first few months of the sound era, there was a tendency to crowd as many words as possible into production and to forget the old art of pantomime.

At present, there is a reversal. Directors are removing as many words as possible and are endeavoring to restore pantomime, registering with the public through the eye primarily, rather than the ear.

Production heads describe shooting sound pictures as "more work, slower progress, with much time wasted." However, with the establishment of technical routine, work is being speeded, losses are being cut and, at the same time, attention can be centered on innovation and improvement.

Following is the division of the cost of making one sound picture that called for a total expenditure of approximately $375,000, with 26 shooting days and 70 hours of retakes:

Direction	$26,000.00
Production manager and assistants.....	1,733.32
Assistant director and clerks.....	2,435.42
Cameramen and assistants.....	7,122.71

Years of great promise — Years of great achievements and sensible progress.

We firmly believe that the coming seasons of 1931-1932 will see many new records established in picture production and theatre profits.

The objective that United Artists' producers have set as their goal for these seasons forecasts the most ambitious program of "Public Appeal" entertainment ever attempted by this leading company.

Approximately fourteen productions will be released during that period, with stories of sure-fire box-office strength, most of them produced by Samuel Goldwyn, who will be in charge of production for United Artists, in addition to producing Samuel Goldwyn Pictures.

Follow the lead of the country's leading showmen and set in UNITED ARTISTS PICTURES as the "backbone service of your year's programs".

ACADEMY OF MOTION PICTURE ARTS AND SCIENCES

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences unites into one body—for the welfare of the industry as a whole—artists and craftsmen participating in all branches of motion picture production. The Academy serves and represents the cultural, technical and professional aspects of motion pictures. It now includes six hundred leading actors, directors, producers, technicians and writers.

The story of the Academy during the past year is one of greatly increased activity, influence and effective service. In the brief life of the institution, four years since its organization, May 11, 1927, its progress has developed in direct response to definite demands made upon it.

Within the industry the Academy provides a common meeting ground for the conciliation of internal differences, for friendly interchange of ideas and for the solution of problems to the general benefit. It is both a forum for the specialized crafts within the industry and the instrument of their harmonious relationship.

The organization is charged with maintaining equitable employment relations between the producing companies and all actors, except extras, not under long-term contract. The Academy Minimum Contract for Artists, several times revised to meet changing conditions, is in its third year as the standard contract of the Hollywood studios.

To better administer the operations of the Actors Adjustment Committee and to expedite the consideration of inquiries, complaints, and general information for the benefit of actors and producers, the board of directors of the Academy established a department for this purpose and appointed William Conklin as the Academy's representative. The department has functioned with excellent results.

In addition to the special arrangement for actors and marking a most significant development in relations between employer and employee, complaints regarding disputes or injustices may be filed by any person or company in the motion picture production industry against any other, whether members of the Academy or not. Matters of dispute which cannot be adjusted informally are referred to the executive committee of the branch concerned, with an appeal allowable to the Conciliation Committee.

The Conciliation Committee of the Academy has continued to function in a manner that reflects great credit on the Committee and on the Academy. It has been called the supreme court of the production industry and its decisions have come to be held in great respect. As time has gone on the cases brought before the Conciliation Committee have lessened in number for the reason that certain disputed points which have been settled no longer come up for adjudication.

Although the Academy majors on conciliation and technical matters, art and technique developments, etc., a reasonable proportion of time has also been given to developing helpful and friendly contacts between the public and the Academy, promoting understanding between the creative artists of the screen and the theatre-goer, through the dissemination of facts and information.

The cultural course in "Introduction to the Photoplay," sponsored by the Academy in 1929, proved so definite a success at the University of Southern California that the course was repeated during the spring of 1930, and has been made a permanent part of the curriculum. Leaders in the various branches of the industry served as lecturers for the course, with the co-operation of the Academy Committee on College Affairs. The late Milton Sills, as chairman of this committee, gave generously and effectively of his energy in forwarding the Academy's college program.

The different branches of the Academy—Actors, Directors, Producers, Technicians and Writers—have continued to function under their respective executive committees as occasions have arisen.

An important development within the Directors Branch has been the formation of an Assistant Directors Section. Active first assistant directors of high standing are admitted to this section and a share in the privileges of Academy membership.

A series of symposium meetings has been sponsored by the Art and Technique Committee and important negotiations proceeded from the activities of the Writers Special Committee.

Awards of Merit are bestowed each year by the Academy for the purpose of recognizing distinguished achievements in the arts and sciences of motion pictures as judged by the workers themselves, and to encourage advancement in such arts and sciences.

Awards for the year ending July 31, 1931, will be conferred at a dinner of the Academy membership in November. Voting on all Awards will be by nomination from branch voting with a final balloting of the entire Academy membership, except for the scientific or technical award, which will be decided by a board of expert judges, according to rules to be recommended by the Technicians Branch.

When the final balloting of the Academy results within three votes of a tie on any Award, two Awards will be conferred, the first a gold trophy statuette and the second a bronze trophy.

The Awards for 1929-1930 were bestowed November 5, 1930, at a banquet attended by 600 members and guests.

Determined by ballot of the Academy membership, based on feature pictures released in Los Angeles during the year ending July 31, 1930, the awards were as follows:

PERFORMANCE BY ACTRESS: Norma Shearer for "The Divorcee."

PERFORMANCE BY ACTOR: George Arliss for "Disraeli."

ACHIEVEMENT BY DIRECTOR: Lewis Milestone for "All Quiet on the Western Front."

OUTSTANDING PRODUCTION: "All Quiet on the Western Front," Universal Studios.

CINEMATOGRAPHIC ACHIEVEMENT: "With Byrd at the South Pole," William Van Der Veer and Joseph T. Rucker, jointly.

ART DIRECTION ACHIEVEMENT: "King of Jazz," Herman Rosse.

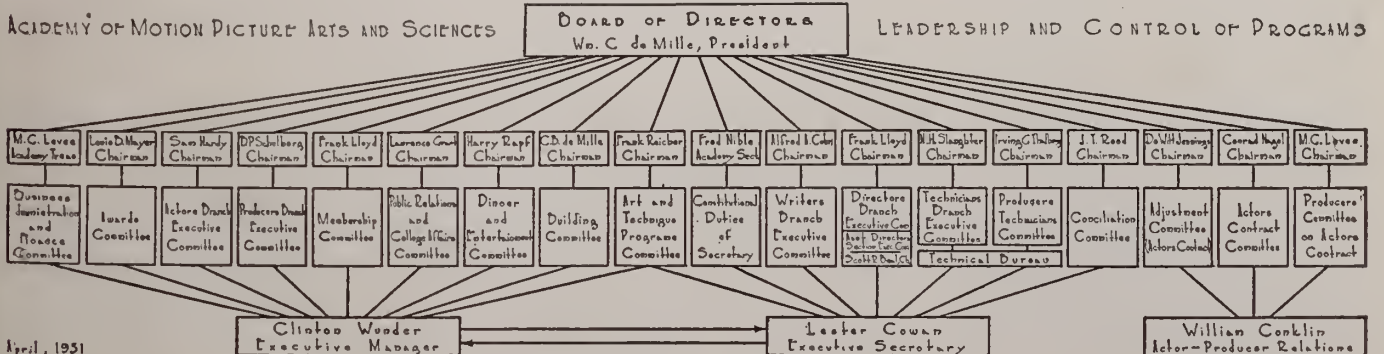

SOUND RECORDING ACHIEVEMENT: "The Big House," Award to the Sound Department of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios.

WRITING ACHIEVEMENT: "The Big House," Frances Marion.

Will H. Hays, President of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., was a guest speaker. There was also an address through the medium of a talking picture of Thomas A. Edison, who, with George Eastman, has been elected to honorary membership in the Academy.

Awards conferred the previous year for the period ended August 1, 1929, were to the following: WARNER BAXTER for acting in the picture "In Old Arizona"; MARY PICKFORD for acting in "Coquette"; FRANK LLOYD for directing "Weary River," "The Divine Lady" and "Drag"; CEDRIC GIBBONS for art direction of "The Bridge of San Luis Rey"; CLYDE DE VINNA for cinematography of "White Shadows in the South Seas." HANS KRALY for writing "The Patriot"; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for the outstanding production of the year, "The Broadway Melody."

Awards for two years ago, or the year ended August 1, 1928, were JANET GAYNOR and EMIL JANNINGS for acting; FRANK BORZAGE and LEWIS MILESTONE for direction; BENJAMIN GLAZER, JOSEPH FARNHAM, and BEN HECHT for writing; CHARLES ROSHER and KARL STRUSS for cinematography; WILLIAM C. MENZIES for art direction, and ROY POMEROY for engineering effects. "WINGS" and "SUNRISE" were declared to be the most outstanding pictures of 1928 and special prizes were awarded to WARNER BROTHERS for "The Jazz Singer" and to CHARLES CHAPLIN for "The Circus."

TECHNICAL BUREAU

The Technical Bureau of the Academy is devoted to advancing the technical perfection of the motion picture. The Bureau handles such specific technical projects of a practical nature as will benefit from cooperative research and investigation. These projects are in general based upon surveys of current practice and development, coupled with an analysis of results obtained by present and proposed methods.

The Bureau recognizes that technical progress requires that the technicians in studio, laboratory, exchange and theatre be brought to understand the viewpoint and the work of one another. It therefore aims to develop this mutual understanding as a basis for carrying out the specific technical projects which contribute to better show in the theatre. Policies are determined by the Producers-Technicians Committee, of which Irving G. Thalberg has been chairman during the past year.

The Bureau is managed by Lester Cowan, executive secretary of the Academy.

Six major problems have been taken up in 1930:

Standardization of release prints.

Silencing of arcs.

Silencing of cameras.

Acoustic properties of set materials.

Release print quality.

Screen illumination and print density.

Additional problems of industry-wide importance will be handled during the coming year.

In addition to the periodic reports of technical committees, and the publication of papers by studio engineers, the bureau supplies special reports on current developments affecting the industry, and interchanges non-competitive information among the studios, thus saving duplication of research.

Among the outstanding activities of the bureau during the past year has been the standardization of makeup of release prints and theatre practice for changeover from reel to reel, resulting in simplified handling of prints and reduction of print mutilation, and annual savings of many thousands of dollars to the industry.

An industry-wide technical coordination of studios, laboratories, theatre circuits, projectionists, and service organizations has been created for the establishment of the Release Print Standard.

Every production studio in Hollywood is now using the Standard for pictures cut after the Standard went into effect. All major circuits have organized affiliated theatres.

An educational campaign designed to reach every person handling prints facilitated the introduction and use of the Standard. More than 30,000 instruction booklets and 25,000 instruction cards were distributed.

Salient features of the new standard are: Standard nomenclature for different types of prints, as well as for the units comprising each reel.

Standard inscription for identification.

Standard synchronizing marks.

Standard methods for changeover from reel to reel.

The Projection Advisory Council, national organization of projectionists, is participating in all aspects of the establishment of the Standard. Among other groups cooperating are the Film Boards of Trade, the American Projection Society, Electrical Research Products, Inc., and RCA Photophone, Inc. The Standard was arrived at after months of survey, study of practices, production of test materials, and experimentation with various methods.

The participation of the motion picture industry has been pledged over a period of years to the program of the U. S. Army Signal Corps for the production of talking pictures for army training purposes. The Hollywood studios will train selected Signal Corps officers in the technique of picture making. These officers eventually will superintend a sound department which the army plans to set up as an extension of its present instructional motion picture studios at Washington.

The first officer assigned to study in Hollywood was Captain F. W. Hoorn, Signal Corps, who arrived in October to begin a nine months' course with the aid of the Technical Bureau.

The program is under the personal supervision of General George S. Gibbs, Chief Signal Officer of the Army.

The major publishing activity of the Academy during the past year was the compilation of an authoritative book on the technical processes of sound recording and reproduction. This was published in May, 1931, through the McGraw-Hill Book Company.

When sound came to Hollywood, it brought a fundamental change in the job of every man in the industry. The motion picture the public sees is the work of a number of closely inter-related crafts in studio, photographic laboratory, and theatre. The need of internal cooperation in each studio was never greater than in the first year of sound; yet the possibilities and limitations of the new equipment and technique were a mystery to the regular employees, who thus found their hands tied for effective cooperation with one another and with the sound experts.

To meet this situation, the industry took action through the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, the joint association of technicians, directors, actors, writers and producers. The initial step was the creation of the Academy School in Fundamentals of Sound for studio employees; and to this school a number of outstanding sound experts contributed their services as instructors. Classes were held in the various studios to which a selected group of 900 employees were admitted.

For the benefit of the students, and of the hundreds more in the studios whom the school could not accommodate, the lectures were published by the Academy as individual papers in the Academy Technical Digest series. (These were printed periodically in Exhibitors Herald and Exhibitors Herald-World, on release.) It was the feeling of the Academy board of directors, however, that this material should be collated in more permanent form and made available to all creative workers and technicians in studios, laboratories, and theatres as a common textbook to promote the mutual understanding and coordination which is vital to the growth of the industry. The lecturers, meeting to discuss the plan of publication, decided upon a policy of expansion and revision to render the book complete and authoritative in subjects and in detail.

The Academy has collaborated with the publishers in assuring presentation of the chapters in clear and graphic form. More than two hundred diagrams, charts and photographs of studio operations illustrate the four hundred pages which will make up the volume.

Following is an outline of subjects discussed in "Recording Sound for Motion Pictures":

FOREWORD, by William C. de Mille, President of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

PREFACE, by Carl Dreher, Director of the Sound Department, RKO Studios.

THE ANCESTRY OF SOUND PICTURES, by H. G. Knox, Vice-President in Charge of Engineering, Electrical Research Products, Inc.

THE NATURE OF SOUND, by Prof. A. W. Nye, Professor of Physics, University of Southern California.

APPENDIX

A GLOSSARY OF MOTION PICTURE TERMS.

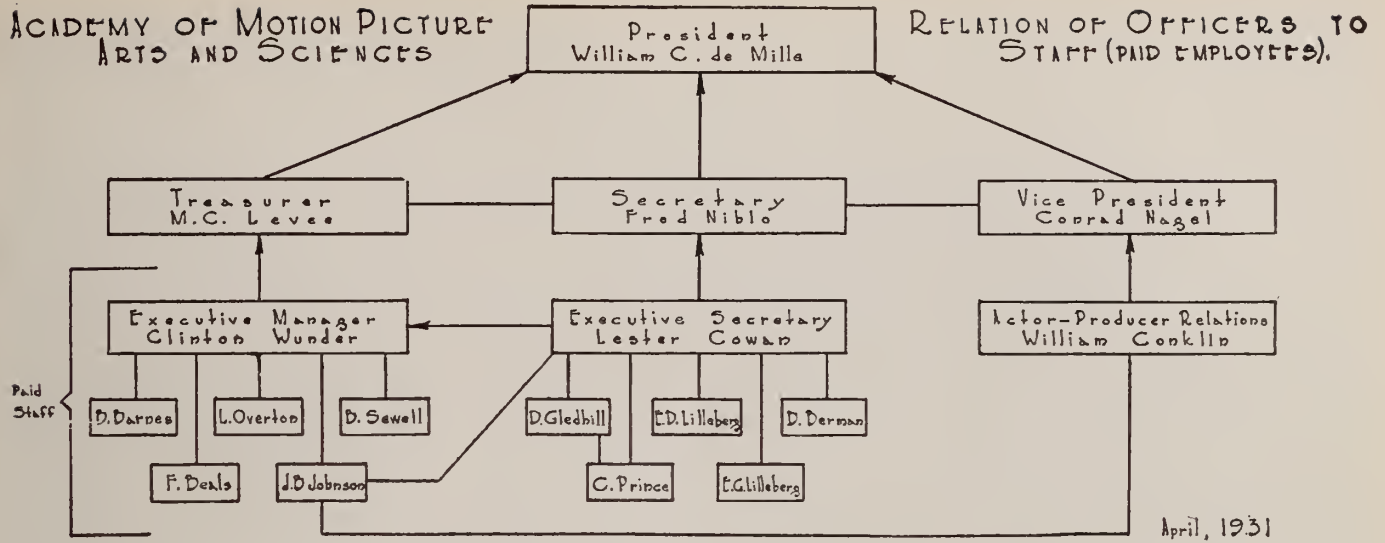

ACADEMY CONTRACT

The Minimum Contract for Artists administered by the Academy has continued in successful and harmonious operation the past year.

The terms have been further clarified by a minor change and several interpretations. By formal action of the actors and producers the provisions of the twelve-hour minimum rest period between calls have been continued in the contract for the remaining four years covered by the basic agreement.

The actors and producers stand side by side in a cooperative effort to enforce not only the letter but the spirit of the contract and guarantee fair dealing and equitable terms to the acting profession and the production companies of Hollywood.

When the basic agreement of the producers and artists went into effect Feb. 13, 1930, it was understood and agreed that the Minimum Contract for Artists, which became the recognized contract beginning March 1, 1930, should continue in operation for one year without change.

It was further agreed that if at least two-thirds of the members of the Artists Committee, comprising twenty-one players of the Actors Branch of the Academy, voted to amend this contract by substituting in lieu of paragraph 12 the provisions for a fifty-four (54) hour cumulative week, such an amendment would take effect beginning March 1, 1931.

On Jan. 14, 1931, a meeting of members of the Actors Branch was held in the Academy Lounge, Roosevelt hotel. One hundred and seventeen were present. Sam Hardy, chairman of the Actors Branch Executive Committee, presided, there being also present the other four members of the Executive Committee: Conrad Nagel, Richard Tucker, George Irving and Lois Wilson.

The following resolution was moved, seconded and unanimously carried:

That it is the sense of this meeting that the provisions of the twelve-hour rest period in the Minimum Contract be continued from and after March 1, 1931, according to the terms of the Basic Agreement.

On Feb. 2, 1931, a meeting of the Actor-Producer Conference Committee on Minimum Contract was held at the Academy offices. President William C. de Milla presided. There were also present for the producers: Irving Thalberg, M. C. Levee, William LeBaron, Sol Wurtzel and Fred Beeton. For the actors: Vice President Conrad Nagel, Lawrence Grant, Mitchell Lewis, DeWitt C. Jennings, Frank Reicher, Monte Blue, Richard Tucker, Jean Hersholt, Sam Hardy, Lloyd Hughes, Reginald Denny, Hallam Cooley, Antonio Moreno, Lois Wilson, Mae Murray, Frank Woods, Lester Cowan, Assistant Secretary George W. Cohen, attorney, and William Conklin, actor-producer relations, were also present.

The resolution of the Actors Branch was reported and a general discussion followed in which were considered possible changes and amendments to be made in the Minimum Contract.

The point was raised that employment conditions of players receiving $65 a week or less are regulated by the Industrial Welfare Commission and the practice of using the Minimum Contract for them tended to conflict with the state labor laws and thus create confusion. Studios were instructed not to use the Minimum Contract for these players.

To take care of occasional emergency situations and strengthen the protection of the 12-hour rest period for the actor, the following resolution was passed:

RESOLVED: That it shall be the duty of the producers to report to the Academy, within 24 hours after the fact has occurred, each and every occasion on which an artist has been recalled for work within a period of less than twelve hours after the time of his dismissal for the day and that such report shall state the reason for recalling the artist to work within the lesser period than said twelve hours.

The action of the Actors Executive Committee in making the Actors Contract Committee a permanent advisory board for consultation on matters pertaining to the contract was reported.

A formal opinion with regard to the provisions of subdivision (a) of Paragraph (5) of the Minimum Contract was asked by the producer representatives who explained the possible bearing of these provisions in the contract upon the economics of foreign picture production. The following resolution was offered by representatives of the actors and unanimously carried:

RESOLVED: That it is the sense of this meeting that the provisions of subdivision (a) of Paragraph (5) of the Minimum Contract be so construed as to permit the producer to manufacture foreign language versions under the provisions of that subdivision.

By the terms of the Basic Agreement, authority to revise the Minimum Contract is vested in a committee of five members of the Actors Branch and five members of the Producers Branch. As all but one member of this committee were among those present Feb. 2, the clarification of the clause on payment for retakes was discussed informally. On Feb. 23, the following revision was drawn up and put into legal effect:

"The third sentence of paragraph 2 of said Minimum Contract shall be and the same is hereby stricken from said Minimum Contract. In lieu and instead of thereof, there shall be inserted in said Minimum Contract, as the third sentence of paragraph 2 thereof, the following: 'Services in connection with retakes, added scenes, 'transparencies,' trick shots, 'trailers,' and/or changes, if such services are commenced within six (6) months after the expiration of the term hereof, shall be at the same rate of compensation as herein set forth, except that compensation for such services shall be paid for the days on which the artist is actually so employed, and except also that the 'Conditions Governing the Employment of Players Employed on a Daily Basis at a Salary in Excess of $15.00 per Day' as approved by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, shall apply to the computation of time in connection with such services. It is agreed, however, that if prior to the commencement of the rendition of such services, the producer shall have agreed in writing to guarantee the artist at least one (1) week's work or one (1) week's compensation in connection with such retakes, added scenes, 'transparencies,' trick shots, 'trailers' and/or changes, then and in that event, the artist's services in connection therewith shall be upon the same terms and upon the same rate of compensation as elsewhere in this contract set forth, such compensation to be paid from the time when the artist's services are first rendered in connection with such retakes, added scenes, 'transparencies,' trick shots, 'trailers' and/or changes, until the completion of the artists' services in connection therewith."

The foregoing amendment became effective March 1, 1931.

Following is the text of the Minimum Contract for Artists, each company printing blanks for itself in its own form:

MINIMUM CONTRACT FOR ARTISTS
CONTINUOUS EMPLOYMENT—WEEKLY BASIS—
WEEKLY SALARY—ONE WEEK MINI-MUM EMPLOYMENT
Effective March 1, 1930

THIS AGREEMENT made this.....day of..... 193..... between..... Corporation (hereinafter called "producer") and..... (hereinafter called "artist").

WITNESSETH:

1. The producer hereby engages the artist to render services as such in the role of..... in a photoplay the working title of which is now "....." at a salary of..... Dollars ($.....) per week. The artist accepts said engagement upon the terms herein specified.
2. The term of employment hereunder shall begin on or about the..... day of..... 193....., and shall continue thereafter until the completion of the photographing and/or recodation of said role. If after the expiration of the term hereof the producer should desire the services of the artist in making retakes, or in making added scenes, or in making any "transparencies" or trick shots, or in making "trailers," or in making any change or changes in said photoplay, or in making any foreign version or versions of said photoplay, then and in either of said events, the artist agrees to render such services in connection therewith as and when the producer may request, unless the artist is otherwise employed, but if otherwise employed the artist will cooperate to the fullest extent in the making of such retakes, added scenes, "transparencies," trick shots, "trailers," changes, and/or foreign versions. Services in connection with retakes, added scenes, "transparencies," trick shots, "trailers," and/or changes, if such services are commenced within six (6) months after the expiration of the term hereof, shall be at the same rate of compensation as herein set forth, except that compensation for such services shall be paid only for the days on which the artist is actually employed, and except also that the "Conditions Governing Employment of Players Employed on a Daily Basis at a Salary in Excess of $15.00 per day" as approved by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, shall apply to the computation of time in connection with such services. (See introductory discussion for change made later.—Ed.) It is agreed, however, that if prior to the commencement of the rendition of such services, the producer shall have agreed in writing to guarantee the artist at least one (1) week's work or one (1) week's compensation in connection with such retakes, added scenes, "transparencies," trick shots, "trailers" and/or changes, then and in that event, the artist's services in connection therewith shall be upon the same terms and upon the same rate of compensation as elsewhere in this contract set forth, such compensation to be paid from the time when the artist's services are first rendered in connection with such retakes, added scenes, "transparencies," trick shots, "trailers" and/or changes, until the completion of the artist's services in connection therewith. The phrase "on or about" as hereinabove used shall allow a latitude of forty-eight (48) hours (exclusive of Sundays and holidays) either prior to or after the date hereinabove specified as the commencement of the term hereof; it being agreed that the exact date for the commencement of the term hereof is to be specified by the producer and is to be not earlier than forty-eight (48) hours before the date hereinabove specified, nor later than forty-eight (48) hours after the date hereinabove specified (exclusive of Sundays and holidays). The term "role" as used in this agreement shall be deemed to refer to said role as now written and/or as it may from time to time hereafter be written and/or lengthened and/or shortened by the producer in the exercise of its sole discretion and judgment.

3. The artist agrees to be prompt in appearing for work as required by the producer, to perform services hereunder in a conscientious and painstaking manner and in accordance with the reasonable instructions of the producer, and to abide by the reasonable studio rules and regulations of the producer. The producer shall have the exclusive right to the services of the artist during the term hereof, and the artist agrees that during the term hereof the artist will not render any services of any kind to or for any person, firm, or corporation other than the producer without first obtaining the express written consent of the producer.

4. The term "photoplay" as used in this agreement shall be deemed to include motion pictures produced and/or exhibited with sound and voice recording, reproducing and/or transmitting devices, radio devices, and all other improvements and devices which are now or may hereafter be used in connection with the production and/or exhibition and/or transmission of any present or future kind of motion picture production. The producer shall have the right to photograph and/or otherwise produce, reproduce, transmit, exhibit, distribute, and exploit in connection with the said photoplay any and all of the artist's acts, poses, plays and appearances of any and all kinds hereunder, and shall further have the right to record, reproduce, transmit, exhibit, distribute, and exploit in connection with said photoplay the artist's voice, and all instrumental, musical, and other sound effects produced by the artist in connection with such acts, poses, plays and appearances. The producer shall likewise have the right to use and give publicity to the artist's name and likeness, photographic or otherwise, and to recordings and reproductions of the artist's voice and all instrumental, musical, and other sound effects produced by the artist hereunder, in connection with the advertising and exploitation of said photoplay. The rights in this paragraph granted to the producer shall inure to the benefit not only of the producer, but also to the benefit of all persons who may hereafter acquire from the producer any right to distribute, transmit, exhibit, advertise, or exploit said photoplay.

5. The producer agrees that it will not "dub" or use a "double" in lieu of the artist, except under the following circumstances: (a) when necessary to expeditiously meet the requirements of foreign exhibition; (See introductory discussion for amendment.—Ed.) (b) when necessary to expeditiously meet censorship requirements, both foreign and domestic; (c) when, in the opinion of the producer, the failure to use a "double" for the performance of hazardous acts might result in physical injury to the artist; (d) when the artist is not available; and (e) when the artist fails or is unable to meet certain requirements of the role, such as singing or the rendition of instrumental music or other similar services requiring special talent or ability other than that possessed by the artist. The artist does hereby agree that under either or any of the conditions hereinabove in subdivisions (a) to (e), both inclusive, of this paragraph 5 set forth, the producer shall have the right to "double" and/or "dub" not only the acts, poses, plays and appearances of the artist, but also the voice of the artist, and all instrumental, musical, and other sound effects to be produced by the artist, to such extent as may be required by the producer.

6. Where the services of the artist are required to be performed outside of the City of Los Angeles or its environs, the producer shall transport the artist and the reasonable personal baggage of the artist, and pay all necessary traveling expenses of the artist, including reasonable charges for board and lodging.

7. If the production of said photoplay be necessarily prevented, suspended, or postponed during the course of production, by reason of fire, accident, strike, riot, act of God, or of the public enemy, or by any executive or judicial order, no salary need be paid the artist for the first week's prevention, suspension, or postponement. If the production of said photoplay be prevented, suspended, or postponed by reason of the illness of any other member of the cast or of the director, full salary shall be paid the artist for the first week's prevention, suspension, or postponement. It shall be the duty of the producer during the first week of any prevention, suspension, or postponement to notify the artist in writing whether the producer will entirely discontinue the production or further suspend or postpone it, and in the latter event the producer shall pay the artist half salary during such further suspended or postponed period. At the end of five (5) weeks from the date on which the producer has stopped production the artist may terminate this employment if the artist so elects, unless the producer continues thereafter to pay the artist full weekly compensation. If the production of said photoplay is prevented, suspended, or postponed for any reason hereinabove in this paragraph provided, then and in that event the producer may terminate this employment at any time after the commencement of such prevention, suspension, or postponement. If the producer elect to terminate this employment by reason of the illness of any other members of the cast or of the director, then the producer shall be obligated to pay the artist such balance, if any, as is then unpaid for services theretofore rendered by the artist, and also one week's compensation, upon the payment of which the producer shall be discharged of and from all liability whatsoever hereunder. If such termination be based on the happening of any other cause hereinabove in this paragraph set forth, then the producer shall be obligated to pay the artist only such balance, if any, as is then unpaid for services theretofore rendered by the artist, and upon the payment of such unpaid balance, if any, the producer shall be discharged of and from all liability whatsoever hereunder. The producer need pay no salary during any period that the artist is incapacitated, by illness or otherwise, from performing the required services hereunder, and in the event of such illness or incapacity the producer, at its option, may terminate this employment without further liability.

8. The producer agrees to furnish all modern wardrobe and wearing apparel reasonably necessary for the portrayal of said role; it being agreed, however, that should so-called "character" or "period" costumes be required the producer shall supply the same. Any loss of or damage to costumes, wardrobe, and other property furnished by the artist necessarily arising through the performance of the artist's services, or through lack of due care on the part of the producer, shall be paid for by the producer to the artist. All costumes, wardrobe and other property furnished by the producer shall belong to the producer and be returned promptly to it, and any loss of or damage thereto arising through lack of due care on the part of the artist, or not necessarily arising through the performance of the artist's services, shall be paid for by the artist to the producer. Any loss of or damage to wardrobe, for which either party hereto may be liable, shall be computed on the basis of depreciation schedules to be furnished from time to time by the American Appraisal Company.

9. The producer may terminate the artist's employment at any time, either prior to the commencement of production of said photoplay or during the course of production; provided, however, that if the producer elect to terminate the artist's employment hereunder more than thirty (30) days prior to the starting date hereinabove in paragraph 2 specified, then and in that event the producer shall be free from all liability of every kind whatsoever; but provided further that if the producer elect to terminate the artist's employment hereunder at any time within thirty (30) days prior to said starting date, or at any time thereafter, or during the course of production of said photoplay, the producer shall be obligated to pay the artist such balance, if any, as is then unpaid for services theretofore rendered by the artist, and also one week's compensation, upon the payment of which the producer shall be discharged of and from all liability whatsoever hereunder, subject, however, to the provisions of paragraphs 7 and 11 hereof.

10. If during the first or last week of the artist's employment hereunder the artist shall have actually appeared before the camera or been on call less than six (6) full days, then the artist's salary for such week shall be prorated, and for this purpose one day's salary shall be one-sixth (1/6) of the weekly rate. If the services of the artist at the commencement of the term hereof are to be rendered at a place which can be reached from the producer's studio within twenty-four (24) hours of travel by ordinary means of transportation, then and in that event compensation shall not begin to accrue to the artist until the artist's first appearance before the camera at such place or until the artist is first put on call at such place; provided, however, that in any event compensation must commence to accrue to the artist not later than forty-eight (48) hours after such place has been reached; and compensation shall accrue to the artist during the time reasonably required to return the artist to Los Angeles. If the services of the artist at the commencement of the term hereof are to be rendered at a place which cannot be reached from the producer's studio within twenty-four (24) hours of travel by ordinary means of transportation, then and in that event compensation shall not commence to accrue to the artist during such travel period and prior to the artist's first appearance before the camera at such place, or prior to the time when the artist is first put on call at such place; provided, however, that in any event compensation must commence to accrue to the artist not later than forty-eight (48) hours after shall such place has been reached; and compensation shall not accrue to the artist during the time reasonably required to return the artist to Los Angeles. A week shall be deemed to start at 12:01 a.m. on..... and end at 12 o'clock midnight of the succeeding..... If, during any week the artist shall have actually appeared before the camera or been on call each day, the artist shall receive one day's additional compensation for the services rendered by the artist on Sunday, and for this purpose, also, one day's salary shall be one-sixth (1/6) of the weekly rate. Compensation to the artist hereunder shall be payable on..... for services rendered up to and including the preceding.....

11. The producer guarantees that it will furnish the artist not less than..... (.....) weeks' employment hereunder; and if the foregoing blank is not filled in, then the producer shall be deemed to have agreed to guarantee to the artist that it will furnish the artist not less than one (1) week's employment hereunder. The guarantee in this paragraph 11 set forth shall be subject, of course, to the rights of suspension and termination hereinabove in paragraph 7 granted to the producer. The producer agrees, that upon request of the artist, it will advise the artist, if and when able to do so, of the estimated date on which, in the opinion of the producer, the artist's employment hereunder will terminate, it being understood, of course, that such estimated date of termination shall not be binding on the producer, but that the producer in good faith and to the best of its ability will endeavor to advise the artist of such estimated date of termination as far in advance of the actual date of termination as the producer may be able to estimate the same.

12. If the artist shall be dismissed for the day, the artist shall not thereafter be recalled for work within a period of less than twelve (12) hours after the time of such dismissal for the day. (See introductory discussion for amendment.—Ed.).

13. If this agreement is not executed by the producer and available for delivery to the artist at the producer's studio, or if the same is not executed by the producer and mailed to the artist, on or before the close of business on the next succeeding business day after this agreement has been executed by the artist, then this agreement, at the option of the artist, shall be null and void. Should the artist elect to exercise the right of termination under the provisions of this paragraph 13, the artist must do so by written notice to be served upon the producer before twelve (12) o'clock, noon, of the second business day after the execution hereof by the artist.

14. All notices which the producer is required or may desire to give to the artist may be given either by mailing the same addressed to the artist at....., Los Angeles, California, or such notice may be given to the artist personally, either orally or in writing.

15. THE ARTIST MUST KEEP THE PRODUCER'S CASTING OFFICE OR THE ASSISTANT DIRECTOR OF SAID PHOTOPLAY ADVISED AS TO WHERE THE ARTIST MAY BE REACHED BY TELEPHONE WITHOUT UNREASONABLE DELAY.

16. Should any dispute or controversy arise between the parties hereto with reference to this contract or the employment herein provided for, such dispute or controversy shall be referred for determination to a committee consisting of five foundation members of the Actors' Branch of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, which committee is to be selected by the Executive Committee of the Actors' Branch of said Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. Either party to such arbitration may appeal from the decision rendered by such committee, and in such event the dispute or controversy between the parties hereto shall be determined by the Conciliation Committee of said Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. Any arbitration hereunder shall be conducted in accordance with the by-laws of said Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, and in accordance with such rules as may from time to time be formulated by said Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the parties hereto have executed this agreement the day and year first above written.

By.....

Entered the University of Pennsylvania (class of 1911) after attending several preparatory schools, then became a newspaper reporter and worked on publicity for the New York Times. Later went to New York Edison Company and McCall Company, and then returned to the Times.

Paramount Pictures was just starting and Zukor was making feature films, Zukor and Hodgkinson paired and brought in Jesse Lasky and Cecil DeMille, and later took in Bosworth Film Company. Burr became a member of the company in the latter part of 1913, and after five years became assistant general manager, holding that post for two years, when he left and started making his own pictures, having had the idea to make the Sewell Ford's Torchy stories. He saw Johnny Hines and used him as actor for the role. His first film was sold to the Strand theatre in N. Y., and it opened there February 3, 1920. A contract was arranged with E. W. Hammons, who was about to start a distributing company for short subjects later to be known as Educational, Burr waited six months for Hammons to get started rather than release through existing companies. The Torchy comedies continued for three years until the star was placed in long features.

Burr then produced all star comedies featuring Charlie Murray and Raymond McKee, Hodgkinson-Pathe release. He made four features yearly in addition to the Hines features. "Rescue Wives," "Truth for Sale," and "I Am the Law" were Burr's outstanding money-makers. He selected many girls for the Torchy comedies who became celebrated stars. The leading women in the first Torchies, in the order named, were Billie Dove, Jacqueline Logan, Dorothy Mackaill, Jobyna Ralston, Norma Shearer, Dolores Costello, Clara Bow and others. He took Johnny Hines, then an obscure young comedian, built him via the two-reel route to stardom with First National and kept him there three years, 1925 to 1928. C. C. Burr is one of the leading independent producers still established and operating after ten years of independent production.

In 1917 Goldwyn was instrumental in bringing about the $25,000,000 Famous Players-Lasky merger, as a result of which he became chairman of the board of directors of that company. In 1918, with Arch and Edgar Selwyn, he formed Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, of which he became president and chief owner. Later sold out his interest to the Metro company and started again as an independent producer under his own name, a position which he has maintained ever since. During 1926 Goldwyn allied his independent film producing organization with United Artists Corporation and through this company have been released "Stella Dallas," "Bulldog Drummond," "This Is Heaven," "The Awakening" and other Samuel Goldwyn productions. On October 13, 1927, he was unanimously elected as owner-member of United Artists by the others, Mary Pickford, Norma Talmadge, Gloria Swanson, Douglas Fairbanks, Charlie Chaplin, Joseph M. Schenck and D. W. Griffith. Goldwyn is credited with "discovering" such players as Ronald Colman, Vilma Banky, Lois Moran, Belle Bennett, Gary Cooper and Walter Byron.

GREENWOOD, MILTON E.: Manager of studio operation and business manager, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Corporation; b. La Placa, Ala., October 15, 1883; p. John C. and Mary J. Krieger, has a son, started in business as a clerk and salesman for an installment sewing machine company and thereafter successively became a book and stationery salesman in Alabama and Texas, oil field laborer in Oklahoma and Texas, railroad worker in Texas, Arizona, Mexico and Pacific Northwest, a mining prospector from Alaska to Mexico and a public accountant in Washington, Oregon and California. He entered the motion picture industry in March, 1923, as business manager of the Louis B. Mayer studios. On the merger into the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios he became successively personal representative of Louis B. Mayer and then business manager of MGM studios.

GRIFFITH, DAVID WARK: b. LaGrange, Ky., January 22, 1880; brown hair and gray eyes; w. 190 pounds; p. Margaret Oglesby and Colonel Jacob Wark Griffith, known locally as "Roarin' Jake" Griffith, during the Civil War, non-professionals; e. University of Kentucky; not married; by reading and music. As a boy, Griffith worked in the mail room of his brother's newspaper in a Kentucky town, wrote theatre notes and night police court reports for the "Cincinnati Enquirer's" Louisville Courier Journal and witnessed his first theatrical performance, Pete Baker in "America's National Game." He also saw Julia Marlowe in "Romola" and promptly decided to become a dramatist; the desire was imparted to the manager of the Meffert Stock Company, then playing at the Masonic Temple in Louisville. He appeared on the stage for the first time in the role of a dancer (using the name of Lawrence Griffith) in "The District School." Then followed other roles and he remained with the Meffert Stock Company throughout its season at the Masonic Temple. While working as a stock company actor in Louisville, he also ran an elevator in a dry goods emporium, worked in a stationery store when not performing on the stage of the Masonic Temple and as a book agent for the Baptist Weekly and Encyclopedia Britannica, for the Baptist Book Concern of Louisville and ore-shovel and puddler in a foundry at Tonawanda, N. Y.

Then came regular periods of stock and road company assignments, first with John Griffith's Strolling Players, David Brayntington being the name adopted by Lawrence Griffith, because he did not wish to have the same name as the star; then he joined Ada Gray's traveling troupe, playing a minor part in "Trills" and Francis Lewisohn in "East Lynne." Followed seasons with the Memphis stock company, Helen Ware, Barney Bernard, Walker Whiteside, Nell Alhambra stock company, J. E. Dodson and finally with Nance O'Neill. His first included those in "Italy," "The Three Musketeers," "de Maupret in 'Itchellou," Abraham Lincoln in "The Ensign" and Sir Francis Drake in "Elizabeth." Hefferdink in Sudermann's "Magda" presented by Miss O'Neill at the Hollis Street theatre in Boston about four years later he began making moving pictures in Los Angeles, in which he and Jacks Kelly, Henry B. Walthall and other Broadway players appeared.

Another phase of Griffith's early career was that of playwright and poet. While in Chicago in the fall of 1907, he attended his first picture show and was greatly impressed by the long lines waiting for admission. Before he left Chicago he wrote a scenario, a screen version of the opera, "La Tosca." Acted in pictures "Ostler Joe," "When Knighthood Was in Flower" and "Other one-reelers." In 1908 became an assistant director to H. M. Marvin, and is credited with developing the "flash-back," "close-up," "mist-photography," "fade-out" and a host of other revolutionary ideas which caused great gasps of astonishment when first flashed on the screen. He was also one of the first directors to make pictures beyond the one-reel length. In 1913 he made "The Battle of the Sexes," following that with "The Awakening Conscience," forerunner of all the current German art films, "Home Sweet Home" and "The Escape." "The Birth of a Nation," which is still being viewed throughout the world, followed these films. In 1916, "Intolerance" was released at the Liberty theatre, New York. During the war he made "Hearts of the World." Among the players he helped to develop were Mary Pickford, Dorothy and Lillian Gish, Blanche Sweet, Mae Marsh, Owen Moore, Henry B. Walthall, Alice Joyce, Lionel Barrymore, Jack and Lottie Pickford, Mabel Normand, James Kirkwood, Harry Carey, Mack Sennett, Mary Alden, Robert Harron, Richard Barthelmess and Constance Talmadge, who made her screen bow in "Intolerance." In 1919 D. W. Griffith, Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin and Douglas Fairbanks founded the United Artists Corporation and Griffith's first picture released through United Artists was "Broken Blossoms," in which Lillian Gish and Richard Barthelmess appeared. This was followed by "The Love Flower," "Way Down East," "Dream Street," "Orphans of the Storm," "One Exciting Night," "The White Rose of America," "Is It Life Wonderful?" and "Sally of the Sawdust." He then made "That Royle Girl" and "The Sorrows of Satan" for Paramount. "Drums of Love," in which Mary Phillipin and Don Alvarado appeared, was the first film made for United Artists by Griffith after an absence of three years, this being followed by "The Battle of the Sexes" story he made in 1913, this time with Phyllis Haver, Jean Hersholt, Belle Bennett and Don Alvarado. In "Lady of the Pavements" Lupe Velez sang. Griffith's "Abraham Lincoln" was his first venture in the all-talking field.

B. Company; then became a clerk in the stock yards for Nelson Morris & Company; also worked for the firm of Otto Young & Company, wholesale jewelers; thence to Oshkosh as bookkeeper in Continental Clothing house, and after four years was promoted to manager.

Back to Chicago in 1906 and intended establishing a chain of 5 and 10 cent stores but became interested in moving picture theatres instead. Opened his first theatre, the Whiteford, on Milwaukee avenue, Chicago; two months later opened his second theatre on Halsted street; then established Laemmler Film Service, Chicago; the next year (1907), he established exchanges in Evansville, Memphis and Omaha, and in June of that year returned to Europe for a visit. In 1908 he established exchanges in Minneapolis, Portland, Ore., Salt Lake City, Montreal and Winnipeg. In April, 1909, he quit the Patents Company and became an independent, organized Imp Company, incorporated as Yankee Films Company; released his first picture, "Hiawatha," 989 feet in length, the second release being "Love's Stratagem," 954 feet long.

From 1909 to 1912 he fought the Patents Company; and in May, 1912, Laemmler, R. J. Cochrane, Charles Bauman, David Horsley, P. A. Powers and W. H. Swanson combined their interests and formed Universal Film Manufacturing Company with offices at 1 Union square, New York City. Later that year Laemmler went to Europe and opened his first American independent foreign office. Laemmler and Cochrane bought out P. A. Powers and obtained control of Universal and in 1924 moved to their present quarters, Fifth avenue and 57th street; in 1925 Universal Pictures Corporation issued the first stock to the public and became established on the New York stock exchange. In June 1926, Laemmler was stricken with appendicitis on board the S. S. B-rengaria and operated upon in London. In December, 1926, he bought the Thomas H. Ince estate near Hollywood and became a resident of California.

On the anniversary of his sixtieth birthday he was honored by a great demonstration by all of Hollywood under the leadership of Mary Pickford and other celebrities of screen and stage who worked for him. "All Quiet on the Western Front," "The King of Jazz," both completed in 1930, were awarded prizes by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. "All Quiet" also won the Film Daily poll and the gold medal of honor of the Faculty of Arts, London, as the best picture of 1930. In September, 1930, Laemmler became a grandfather and grand-daddy (Larrie took the name "Uncle Carl") as the industry's affectionate nickname for the veteran producer. Fitting observance was made in February, 1931, of his silver jubilee in the business, and a bound volume of letters received from exhibitors on the occasion was presented to him in Hollywood, the presentation being made by Martin Quigley and William A. Johnston, general manager of the West Coast offices of C. E. C. LeBaron, in connection with the silver jubilee. He was one of the first men from the West Coast to go to Alaska at the time of the earliest gold rush and one of the first hundred to reach Nome, this after a brief reportorial experience on the San Francisco newspaper. On his return from Alaska he became a musician and leader of the Royal Hawaiian Band of Honolulu. When he came back to the States he capitalized his experience by associating himself with vaudeville enterprises and presented a number of important musical acts in association with the late Henry R. Harris. In fact, Lasky's musical acts are still the recognized vaudeville standards for that character of entertainment. Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, of which he was president and which he organized in association with Samuel Goldwyn and Cecil B. DeMille, began business in January, 1914. The company produced several of the famous Belasco dramas, including "The Rose of the Rancho," "The Girl of the Golden West," "The Warnings of Virginia," "The Governor's Lady," and "The Woman." Among the stars who appeared under the Lasky banner were Edward Aheles, Edmund Breese, Thomas W. Ross, Blanche Sweet, Dustin Farnum, Max Figaner, Robert Edeson, H. B. Warner, the late Theodore Roberts, Edith Taliaferro, Wallace Fedinger, Edith Wynne Mathison, Victor Moore, Mabel Van Buren, House Peters, Charlotte Walker, Ina Claire, Fannie Ward, Donald Brian, Carlyle Blackwell, Laura Hope Crews, Rita Jolivet and Geraldine Farrar. When Famous Players Film Company and Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company combined in July, 1916, Lasky was made first vice president of the new corporation and has continued as such ever since. From the outset he has been in complete charge of the company's production, dividing his time between the big Lasky studio at Hollywood and the home office in New York, where he is in close touch with the activities of the Eastern studio on Long Island.

LATHEM, FREDERICK: Born and reared in England. Produced shows at leading London theatres, before coming to New York. SCHULBERG, B. P.: General manager of West Coast production, Paramount Public; b. Bridgeport, Conn., January 19, 1892; e. high school, New York City, and College of Producer of New York. First position as leaving to become associate editor of a magazine, Film Reports, organized in the interests of independent producers and exhibitors of the then exceedingly young and tender motion picture industry. As associate editor of Film Reports he built up friendships and contacts that enabled him, a year later, to select the producer with whom he desired to affiliate. Because of friendship he accepted a dual post of publicity director and scenario writer with Rex Pictures Corporation, New York City, and a year later went with Adolph Zukor when Zukor launched his Famous Players Company in 1912. Thus it came about that Schulberg exploited the first feature length, big name motion picture sold in America, "Queen Elizabeth," with Sarah Bernhardt in the title role. First venture in feature film was "The Princess of Fonda." "Queen Elizabeth" was a French film bought by Zukor for distribution in America. When Zukor's Famous Players Company combined with Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company in 1915 to become the Paramount corporation, Schulberg retained his post of double duty. After several years with Paramount he made the decision to try his hand at independent production. During this period he saw the Elmer Clifton film, "Days of the Sea in Ships," and playing a minor role, that of a stowaway, was a little girl who attracted Schulberg's attention. He immediately wired his associate, who was in the East, with the result that Clara Bow came to Hollywood to play in the Schulberg company. In 1925, Schulberg rejoined Paramount in the capacity of associate producer, the first time this title was used in production circles, later becoming general manager of all West Coast productions for Paramount.

WHEN SIN TAKES A HOLIDAY BORN TO LOVE THE COMMON LAW

duction, First National studios, Burbank, Cal.; b. Chicago, Ill.; e. in Chicago. Entered the motion picture industry in 1922. To learn the distribution and exhibition phases of the industry he obtained a position as manager in a Los Angeles theatre. Later was placed in charge of the publicity department of Warner Bros. for a year and left to join Principal Pictures Corporation, returning to Warner Bros. seven months later. In charge of studio management of First National when Warner Bros. and First National consolidated. Held title of studio manager and later associate in charge of production at First National Vitaphone plant.

WARNER, JACK: Vice president in charge of production, Warner Bros., First National Studios, Burbank, Cal.; b. London, Ontario, Can.; p. Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Warner, non-professional; e. Baltimore schools. When he had finished school he joined his brothers, Harry and Albert, in the opening of a hi-cycle shop at Youngstown, Ohio, and in that venture, being the youngest, he was errand boy, clerk and general handy man about the place. Then the time came when the Warner brothers opened their first theatre at Newcastle, Pa., where he felt at home, for he had developed a good tenor voice and used to sing illustrated songs. While not thus occupied he did the usual run of jobs that are necessary around a small theatre. At the time Warner Bros. opened its exchange at Pittsburgh and then established Warner Features, he again found a congenial field. He inspected the pictures that were being considered and on his judgment Harry Warner, then as now executive of the firm, rested his decision on them. When the Warners fell upon hard times and separated, Jack went to Hollywood and studied the methods of picture production.

At the time when the Warner brothers joined again to produce "My Four Years in Germany," Jack had begun to find that production was his true field. He took an active part in the artistic direction of that picture which set the Warner Bros. on their feet and started them on the road to success. With the fortunes of the firm re-established, the Warner brothers decided they needed a studio on the West Coast and he went out to take an active part in its direction. He was later called East, during the development of Vitaphone, to participate in the perfection of the talking picture. After the success of Vitaphone was established and the making of Vitaphone pictures was moved to the Hollywood Studio, he took charge of their director and production.

It has been largely due to the artistic vision of Jack Warner that so many fine pictures have emanated from the Warner Bros. studio. He is now vice president in charge of production for Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., and for the Vitaphone Corporation. In addition to having charge of the large Warner Brothers Hollywood Studio he is now also directing the operations of First National Studio on the Coast.

This orchestral director tried to give his audiences all Bach—no light melodies.

This radio station owner found that male quartets were most popular—so he broadcast nothing else.

This chef tried to feed his patrons nothing but meat—no soups, salads, spices or sweets.

This doctor decided that if one dose of medicine was good then two should be twice as good—but his patients all died.

This publisher attempted a magazine containing nothing but novels—no short stories, no jokes.

“ENOUGH IS BETTER THAN TOO MUCH”

Though we've said it before, we must repeat again, "All features and no shorts make any program a dull program."

The pendulum swings from craze to craze and back again. But the wise man sits on the middle ground and knows that the keynote of success is proper balance.

Now the handwriting is on the wall, spelling the doom of the double feature. It is written in bold type in the trade press—written in shrinking figures in the bank books of countless theatre owners—and, most surely and clearly of all, it is written in the minds of the "fed-up" public, drugged with doubles and starved for a lack of laughs.

"—it is quality and not quantity that brings seekers of entertainment to the box-office . . . keep away from double features," says Jack Alieoate in THE FILM DAILY.

Under the banner line "Double Bill Fight To Boost Shorts" MOTION PICTURE HERALD announces "Publix Starts Building Up Shorts To Counter-balance Double Shows At Competitive Houses."

The FILM DAILY says of the short subject program—

. . . "it is far preferable to the suicide policy of double features."

Adolph Zukor is quoted in FILM DAILY as saying, "Double feature programs work to no one's advantage."

And according to Felix Feist in FILM DAILY ". double features help to drive the juvenile trade from the theatres."

A Message from Carl Laemmle

You liked the pictures Universal made for the present year. You proved it by buying them and playing them as never before. And you made money on them. ~ ~ ~

So, when I tell you the pictures planned for production for the 1931-32 season are superior in every way to those you liked so well, you know I am making a statement of vital significance to you.

You will do even better with them than with Universal's preceding list. If you study their exploitation possibilities with a fraction of the care which we gave to selecting them, you will be as pleased to buy them as I am to offer them.

~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ ~

A Message from Carl Laemmle, Jr.

With the help of the most efficient production staff any studio can boast, I have read, studied, checked and double-checked hundreds of books, plays and original stories. I have rejected scores for every one I have considered worthy of making into a picture. ~ ~ ~

The stories selected for 1931-32 production represent the cream of the accepted ones. In every instance, my staff and I have studied the casting with only one main thought in mind—your box-office.

To make each perfect story a perfect picture, we have chosen directors of known skill, men whose names and whose past performances are in themselves complete assurance that in booking their pictures you will get more than you bargained for.

ABBOTT, GEORGE. b. Salamanca, New York, c. Kearney Military Academy, Hamburg high school, University of Rochester, then to Harvard to take Professor Baker's English 43 course. He wrote a play entitled "The Family," which was produced by the Harvard Dramatic Club, and "The Man in the Manhole," which won a prize offered by Keith's theatre. Through this he became superintendent of the theatre the following year, which was in 1913. In 1914 he went to New York to become an actor, and his first good part was that of the father of triplets in David Belasco's production, "Daughter." Then came parts in "Texas," "Halfway to the Great," "Hell Bent for Heaven," "White Desert," "Lazibones" and "Professional." During the run of "Professional," a play that James Gleason and he had written called "The Fall Guy," was produced and was a success. The next year he collaborated with Vincent Smith on "The Holy Terror" and played the lead. It was a failure, and that was his last part. From then on he directed and wrote. He directed the following plays: "Love 'Em and Leave 'Em," "Broadway," "Four Walls" and "Cocotte" and wrote "Spread Eagle," "Jarcanean" and then directed "Chicago" and "Gentleman of the Press," "Carnival Man," "The Bishop's Land," "Slicka." To Paramount Public in 1930 directed "Halfway to Heaven," "Manlaughter," "Sea God," "Why Bring That Up."

AOLFE, JOHN G. b. New York City; by golf and horseback riding. Director of the stage and screen for fifteen years. Among pictures directed for Warner Bros. are: "Sons of Shylock," "In the Headlines," "Evidence," "Dumbbells in Bed," "Fame," "Penny Arcade," "Letters" and "College Lovers."

ANDERSON, JOHN MURRAY. b. St. John's, Newfoundland, September 20, 1886; e. Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts in London under Sir Herbert Beerholm Tree and singing under Sir Charles Santley; b. 6 feet; blond hair, gray blue eyes; by, autograph collecting. Produced the first Greenwich Village Follies, and many subsequent Follies; also produced with Irving Berlin, "Music Box Revue" in 1924; produced "Jack and Jill," "What's in a Name," "Hello, Lady," "Dear Enemy," and "The League of Nations," which had a long run in London. From 1926 to 1928 he produced 57 unit presentation shows for Public Theatre, signed a long term contract with Universal in 1930; directed "King of Jazz" and "Lilies of Broadway."

ANDREWS, OEL. b. St. Louis, Mo.; e. in St. Louis. Professional career began as initial direction man for Thomas H. Ince; sixteen years as film editor, laboratory man, camera man, titler, scenarist, assistant director and director; recent work includes: "Wild West Show," "Hawthide Kid," "Hero on Horseshack," Universal; "The Hackett," co-scenarist for Paramount; "The Galloping Fish," First National.

ARCHAINBAUD, GEORGE. b. Paris, France, May 7, 1890; h. 5 feet 11 inches; brown and gray hair and brown eyes; w. 182 pounds; p. Alice Archainbaud and Emile Chataud, stage director, professional; e. University of Paris; m. Katherine R. Johnston, non-professional; by, piano and tennis. Played abroad with some of the most distinguished French stars; also assistant stage manager. Connected with the screen for the past 17 years, and assisted the best directors in this country and since 1915 directed the most prominent films in the best companies. Started at the World Film and directed Alice Brady, Ethel Clayton, Kitty Gordon, Milton Sills, Montague Love, then joined Selznick Pictures and directed Elaine Hammerstein, Corinne Griffith, Conway Tearle, Eugene O'Brien, next joined Fox Films and later First National and directed Evelyn Brent, Doris Kenyon, Milton Sills, Mary Astor, Lloyd Hughes, Ben Lyon. Was with Tiffany Studio the two years and then with Columbia, where he finished three 100 per cent talking and musical pictures. Has directed (1929) "Man in Hobbles," "Two Men and a Maid" and "Voice Within." To RKO in 1930. Directed "Framed," "Smooth as Satan," "Square Dice," "Silver Horde," "Alias French Gentle."

ARZNER, OOROTHY. b. San Francisco, Cal.; h. 5 feet 4 inches; brown hair and blue eyes; w. 116 pounds; e. Marlborough School for Girls and the University of Southern California; not married. Miss Arzner impressed William DeMille by her interest in motion pictures when she visited him in 1920 and he obtained a position for her as stenographer in the scenario department. Later she became script clerk, film cutter for James Cruze, and then scenario writer.
